Residents react to arrests here: 'It's about time'

by JILL BETTNER

The Wheeling housewife breathed a sigh of resignation and said, "All I can say is it's about time. I'm not surprised at all, we all knew something was going on."

She had been asked to comment on a six-month federal investigation, that last week resulted in the indictments of six persons on charges of extortion and conspiracy in connection with alleged shake-downs of developers.

Reactions to the arrests by village residents were low-key, in sharp contrast to expressions of "shock" and "surprise" by village officials.

William Bieber, director of building and zoning; Michael Valenza, head of the environmental commission and a former village trustee; and William Hart, former village trustee, were among those indicted by a federal grand jury.

Others named in the indictments were James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, who has played a backstage role in Wheeling politics for more than a decade; Nicholas

Phillips, a cousin of Stavros and employee of the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals; and Ira Colitz, a member of the county zoning board and former Democratic state representative from Chicago's 12th District.

THE SIX ARE accused of accepting a total of $300,000 from several developers and from Wickes Inc. in return for village zoning approval, permits and other favors between 1968 and 1973.

"I've heard about Stavros," said housewife Suzanne Kurt, 697 S. Merle Ln. "If he is involved in anything dishonest, I'm glad to have it come to the fore."

Mrs. Kurt said rumors of wrongdoing by village officials and others have been widespread in the community. Like other residents, she said indictments in Wheeling weren't unexpected after the recent arrests in Hoffman Estates and the shady deals uncovered in other suburbs by U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office.

"It seems like you get a little bit of this all over," she said. "I think people have just kind of become immune to it—they're not surprised by anything. I hope it won't create too much of an attitude of complete distrust. There are good guys and bad guys, but sometimes it's difficult to tell the difference."

"I think it's terrible about the arrests here, but with so much crooked stuff going on in the world, I'd expect anything," said Charles Krueger, proving Mrs. Kurt's point.

EDWARD Mahoney, 1450 Sandpebble Dr., raised the question of the possible effect that allowing builders to bend or break village building codes could have on the village in years to come.

"Nobody likes public officials stealing from the people and everything," Mahoney commented. "With all those condominiums they're jamming down our throats, we're going to have some terrible flooding problems in the future."

JAMES "JIMMY" STAVROS finishes nearly four hours of bond procedure Thursday in U. S. District court by swearing to his identity. Stavros was released after payment of $1,350 in bond following indictment on charges of extortion and conspiracy. Near Stavros are: Joel Murray, his attorney; Ted Stavros, his brother; and former Wheeling trustee William Hart, who was indicted for conspiracy to commit extortion. He was also released on bond.

County zoner quits, planner suspended

Two indicted officials leave posts

by BOB CASEY and AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Two officials indicted last week on extortion charges in connection with a Wheeling zoning case have left their posts with the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals.

Ira Colitz, 58, of 1000 N. Lake Shore Dr., Chicago, resigned his membership on the zoning board and Nicholas Phillips, 39, of 410 W. Marion St., Prospect Heights, was suspended from his $18,000-a-year planner job with the board by County Board President George Dunne.

They were among six men, including James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and two current Wheeling village officials accused by a federal grand jury of extorting a total of $300,000 from developers and builders in return for zoning and other favors.

The two village officials, William Bieber, $21,500-a-year director of building and zoning, and Michael Valenza, former trustee and head of the environmental commission, declined to discuss whether they will resign.

Parks in another effort to make Childerley park site

by RICH MONACK and JOE FRANZ

The Wheeling Park District will make another effort tonight to convince the village board to designate the Childerley property as a park site on the official village map.

Park officials are hopeful that a joint special meeting between them, village trustees and representatives of Franklin Boulevard Hospital last week will get them a favorable vote. The hospital is also interested in the site at 508 McHenry Rd. for a satellite facility.

Norman Davis, a consultant for the hospital, told the two boards and an audience of about 15 people, however, that his group is in a "confused position."

"As far as I'm concerned, we are really not in contention with anybody."

DAVIS SAID HE was unaware of anyone else wanting the Childerley site until a Herald reporter contacted him last week and asked about the situation. Davis then added that the only reason is because it was offered to the hospital by village officials when the hospital was invited to Wheeling.

"We are not bound in any way to any specific plot of land," said Davis. "There is also no guarantee in the world that the Buffalo Grove-Wheeling area is going to get a hospital. We're willing to bring a satellite hospital here."

Davis also said that the main problem

Hospital a 2-town project: officials

Franklin Boulevard Hospital officials "definitely" consider their proposed satellite facility a Buffalo Grove and Wheeling venture, despite never consulting Buffalo Grove village officials or surveying its residents.

Those were the feelings of Norman Davis, a consultant for the hospital. He said of a special meeting in Wheeling last week that the hospital officials consider Buffalo Grove and Wheeling "like the twin cities."

When asked why the people of Buffalo Grove were never surveyed, Davis said the survey of Wheeling residents' needs was sufficient enough.

"When you have two villages so much alike there is no need to survey both of them. Besides that the survey that was conducted was done by the Village of Wheeling."

DAVIS ADDED that all considerations and projections being made by the hospi-

Lace, Battaglia will run for school board reelection

Incumbent Dist. 23 board members Melvin A. Lace and Vincent Battaglia will seek reelection to three-year terms in the April School board election.

Lace, 3 Garden Ct., Prospect Heights, will be seeking his third term on the board while Battaglia, 2024 Northwood, Arlington Heights, will be running for his first full term. Battaglia was first elected to the board last year to fill an unexpired vacancy.

The terms of the two are the only seats up for election on the board this year. Because there is no caucus group in the district, candidates will run without being screened and endorsed by a district citizens' group.

"I will run with the idea in mind of trying to keep expenses for the district within reason," Lace said. Lace is currently school board president.

Lace said he would also like to see a citizens' caucus group recreated in the district because he believes it would stimulate interest in school activities from people within the community. A caucus existed in the district three years ago but broke up following the 1971 election.

Battaglia, on the other hand, said the existence of a caucus tends to give a select group of people the power to choose candidates. Voters are then left with less of a choice, he contends.

District meeting that the hospital will serve Wheeling and Buffalo Grove. He also said his group is not in contention with anyone for land and if park officials can find the group another site.

Landing plan may cut O'Hare noise

A new landing procedure credited with reducing noise will be tested beginning April 1 at O'Hare International Airport. The Federal Aviation Administration announced last week it will test two-step landings, which make use of a steeper initial descent and thus have less noise impact on communities surrounding the airport.

The procedure, to be flown by a DC-8, with the cooperation of United Air Lines, is expected to reduce the area that receives 90 decibel landing noise from 18.1 square miles to 3.7 square miles around the airport. The six-month test, also being conducted at two other U.S. cities, could result in adoption of the two-step procedure at noise-sensitive airports.

Water declared safe

Is it safe to drink the water? In Mount Prospect it is, following a weekend of some apprehension for some 6,000 residents. Families in the New Town section of north Mount Prospect and nearby unincorporated areas were told to boil their water or add chlorine bleach to it while tests were under way to determine if well water of Citizens Utility Co. was contaminated. The contamination was thought to have occurred when two wells malfunctioned. Tests showed the water is fit to drink.

Crane to meet 'impeachers'

Local residents who believe President Nixon should be impeached and who are organized into the Impeach Nixon Committee will meet with Rep. Philip Crane (R-12th) to discuss their views. The committee members confronted Crane during a flag dedication ceremony in Palatine Friday. Crane said he may not have time to meet with them until March and in any case his position must be to remain "absolutely neutral" since as a congressman he would be called upon to sit in judgment of the President should impeachment proceedings begin.

Old feud finally ends

Residents of an unincorporated area near Elk Grove Village decided to contract with the village for fire and ambulance protection Saturday night, ending a long feud between the two groups.

An overwhelming majority of the Itasca Meadows Homeowners Assn. decided to contract with Elk Grove Village for $42 per year for each home. The agreement ends four years of often bitter debate between the homeowners and the village over fire and ambulance protection.

Regular may climb to 60 cents per gallon

Gasoline 'pinch' is easing

The pinch is off gasoline supplies, at least for a few weeks. Prices for regular gasoline are edging upward to the mid-50s, and will probably top out near 60 cents a gallon, during February, says Bob Esserman of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Assn.

Esserman said Friday that price boosts for gasoline of 3 cents to 5.8 cents a gallon were announced for February by major oil companies, with added price boosts sure to come.

No one knows for sure what the outlook for the gasoline supplies will be at the end of February, he continued. "New allocations were set for the month based on deliveries for 1972," said Esserman. "So there will be a few problems."

"Half the people clogging up the lines waiting for gasoline really didn't need gas," said Esserman of last week's problems. Stations with 44 limit reported many customers buying $2.40 or less worth of gas.

HERB HUGO, Midwest bureau chief for the Platt's Oilgram Publication, echoes Esserman's comments about panic buyers.

"We're all too jumpy and nervous," he comments. "It doesn't take much to stampede us. Like a bunch of lemmings. If everybody bought normally, then we wouldn't have such a (shortage) problem."

Hugo predicts that pump prices for regular gasoline may average 60 cents a gallon within the next two weeks.

Hugo expects prices to level off within a month or two, contingent on increased flows of crude oil from Arab countries.

The petroleum expert expects William Simon, Federal Energy Office chief, to Expressway backups declining

Incidents of traffic congestion and slowdowns on Chicago expressways have dropped by two-thirds during peak rush hours because the gasoline shortage is keeping drivers off the road.

A week-long study by the Illinois Division of Highways found overall traffic reductions of 10 to 15 per cent on the expressways compared with a similar period last year. The result is that congestion is only one-third its former level.

On the now gasless Sundays, the department study shows 13 to 22 per cent less vehicles on the "day of rest."

The effect on the tollways, which have had to close gasoline stations at oases because of long traffic lines, will be known next week when the Illinois State Tollway Authority releases figures on its recent traffic loads.

Decreasing use of cars is also evident at the end of the line — at various parking lots and garages in the Loop — where the number of unused spaces is growing.

The case of the disappearing motorist has not been solved, however, because there is no easy way to find out how many drivers have begun to take advantage of car pools.

Chicago & North Western Rwy. Co., reports only 2 to 4 per cent higher ridership in recent weeks compared to a year ago, but they have not been able to determine how much of the increase is related to the energy situation and how much is from other reasons.

A large increase might lead to crowded aisles and standing commuters on the C&N's northwest line, which is full to capacity on some rush hour runs. "We're able to handle the load now," said Jim McDonald, of the C & NW public relations office.

move up his timetable for the change-over to increased gasoline production. This could ease the expected shortages in gas supply in the heavy driving season which starts in April.

HOME HEATING oil users are over the hump of shortage scares and skyrocketing prices, agrees Wayne Parthun, managing director of the Oil Heat Marketers Assn. in Chicago. Prices range from the mid 20s to as high as $2 cents a gallon for No. 2 heating oil, he said. He expects the new FEO regulations for February to stabilize prices, and possibly allow price rollbacks.

A heating oil price of 26.2 cents a gallon was reported by Ron Cox of the Palatine Oil Co., although his supply is short.

Geneva Hollinger, owner of the Gaare Oil Co. in Palatine, said heating oil supplies are ample to serve local customers. Her price for January was 27.4 cents a gallon. Other area prices ranged upward to 34 cents a gallon.

Allen Rouss, assistant chief of stabilization for the Internal Revenue Service in Chicago, said a recent rash of complaints about heating oil prices spurred audits of area suppliers. Voluntary price rollbacks by gasoline dealers already number more than 170 in the Chicago area.

Thirty-two circulation executives for newspapers in 19 states and two provinces of Canada are attending the program, which began Sunday.

They will discuss problems relating to the organization and operation of the circulation department, personnel management, motivation and supervision, transportation and delivery systems, single-copy sales, marketing and research, promotion policies and other matters.

The seminar will include roundtable idea exchanges and clinic analyses of newspapers represented. Participants will be guests of the circulation department of The New York Times during one evening of the session.

Friends give $12,400 to Clearbrook Center

A check for $12,400 was presented to the board of directors for Clearbrook Center for the Retarded in Rolling Meadows recently.

The money is earmarked to cover a deficit incurred in bringing the newly opened Arlington Heights Clearbrook House, 420 S. Walnut St., up to existing fire and safety codes. It was presented by the Friends of Clearbrook and represents proceeds from the group's annual brunch.

Clearbrook House is home to 14 mild and moderately retarded adults. It serves as a half way house, providing its occupants with a chance to learn the skills necessary to live independently.

Speaking about Real Estate

Robert L. Nelson
President
Robert L. Nelson, Real Estate

Why you shouldn't sell your own home

The steady stream of "how to do it" articles is evidence of the marked degree to which the typical homeowner has become a determined do-it-yourselfer... willing or not!

For more and more Americans leisure time activities consist of such home improvement projects as house painting, patio building, papering or paneling a room—all done with an eye to saving money. When it comes to selling the house however, this do-it-yourselfer philosophy can very easily work to the homeowner's disadvantage.

Selling property is definitely a job for a professional and it's the professional real estate broker who is best qualified to help the homeowner dispose of his property at the best possible terms in the prevailing market.

According to a recent survey, the primary reason why some people try to sell their own homes is to avoid the commission the Broker charges for his professional services. This is rather like trying your own case in court to save the attorney's fee. It can be done, of course, but it involves far more time and effort than most people realize and the actual selling price may end up substantially below the firm price the homeowner has hoped to receive.

Why? For one thing, most buyers believe, whether true or not, that owners inflate the price of their home by at least the amount of the broker's usual commission. The prospective purchaser will naturally try to force the price down even though the owner has had to expend the effort and selling expense.

Assuming you are able to find someone who is truly interested in buying your home, how do you solve some of the knotty legal and financial questions that arise? How does the buyer finance it? Who pays the points? Do you carry the mortgage? Does the buyer pay you in cash? What are the advantages of each? Your Real Estate Broker can tell you.

One of the most important and frequently overlooked reasons for using a real estate broker is that only qualified buyers are shown your property. The "For Sale By Owner" sign is an invitation for anyone to gain entrance to your home regardless of motive.

Many home buyers overestimate their ability to qualify financially for the house they have in mind. The real estate broker is trained to pre-qualify his prospect's financial abilities thereby avoiding the time consuming expense and frustration of contracts with home seekers who eventually discover they cannot afford to go through with the purchase.

In addition, the real estate broker's experience in arranging home financing through various sources can mean a much quicker sale. The broker has accurate up to date information on the financing terms and services available.

The prospective purchaser is also much more likely to discuss his reservations about the house with a real estate broker than with the homeowner. Once these hidden objections are brought to light they can often be resolved — another reason why houses tend to be sold faster when a real estate broker's services are used.

The broker also maintains an active follow-up system for all his prospective buyers. Someone looking for a home three months ago may have been unimpressed with homes available then but yours could be exactly what the buyer had in mind.

Moreover, when someone tries to sell his own home the property for all practical purposes is off the market whenever he and his family are away. With the real estate broker, on the other hand, the house is for sale all day long, every day of the week, because there is always someone available to talk business with the prospective buyer.

It simply isn't their nature

British revolting? No way

by ROBERT MUSEL

United Press International

LONDON — Britain is in trouble, but the prophets of doom perching around this country like vultures are doomed to go hungry. There will be no coup, no revolution. It simply isn't in the British character to solve its problems by dictatorship or violence.

If coal miners go through with a planned national strike Feb. 10 and gather enough support from other unions to plunge the nation into industrial chaos, there may be local outbreaks of what might be called aggressive picketing. But no one expects fighting in Downing Street or the formation of a Worker's Collective.

A blunt avowal that the Labor Party, spokesman of the working class, and the ruling Conservative Party have an identity of interest in a constitutional solution to the worst crisis to face the country since World War II, came this week when both attacked the Communist vice president of the Mine Workers Union. He and other Communists, who have been infiltrating the big unions for years, were warned that no union, no matter how tight its grip on the nation's jugular, could bring down a government.

Only the ballot box could do that.

The 20th Century has been traumatic for Britain. When Queen Victoria died in 1901 — and Lord Rothschild, head of the government think-tank, recently suggested too many people acted as though she were still alive — the British Empire covered nearly one-third of the globe, 16 million square miles, an area in which nearly one billion people now live. Today there is a loosely knit Commonwealth, but for practical purposes Britain is a small offshore island of 94,000 square miles and 55 million people.

But it is still one of the great trading nations of the earth with a wealth of resourceful human material. Britons have many inventions to their credit, including the jet engine, the hovercraft and a claim to television. Why then, since the triumph of World War II, has it lost so much power and influence?

"The real English disease for the past 10 or 20 years," said Michael Clapham, president of the Confederation of British Industry, "has been our low level of productivity. Our wages are lower, our holdays longer than our competitors. They are lower because we produce less. Unless we put this right, we risk becoming the peasants of the Western World."

Lord Rothschild, head of the Central Policy Review Staff, agreed Britons might be "the Sicilians" of Europe by 1985 when, unless things change, the British gross national product might be only half of that of France or Italy. He said Britons had to get used to the idea this was no longer one of the wealthiest, most influential and important nations in the world and face realities.

Lord George Brown, former Labor foreign secretary, recently chided his countrymen: "It looks abroad like the country no longer has the will to live and is no longer worth considering in the main league."

But, he added, if the nation accepted discipline as a way of life, it could make enormous and beneficial changes in a short time.

PRIME MINISTER Edward Heath, possibly pondering the results of a strike ballot of 269,000 mineworkers today, finds time to play the organ.

Heath seeks to postpone coal shutdown

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Edward Heath will try to persuade union leaders to postpone plunging Britain into a national coal shutdown next Sunday, government officials said, adding he will ask heads of the 10 million member Trades Union Congress to intervene when he meets with them today.

Officials said Heath sought a truce while a new independent study is made of miners pay claims. He has said a national coal shutdown would be disastrous for Britain's economy.

The result of a strike ballot of 269,000 mineworkers will be announced today. Union officials predicted a landslide in favor of a walkout.

The union has said if more than 55 per cent vote for a walkout, a nationwide coal strike will begin Sunday.

A 12-week slowdown has already forced industry on a three-day work week and plunged Britain into its worst crisis since 1945.

Ask 45-day moratorium in violent coast-to-coast truckers' strike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Convening a top-level conference of government and trucking industry leaders here, Pennsylvania Gov. Milton J. Shapp Sunday called for a 45-day moratorium in the violent coast-to-coast strike of independent truckers and asked federal officials for a firm commitment to the truckers problems.

After more than six hours of talks in and out of the closed-door meeting, there were indications that the group possibly was making progress toward ironing out the economic problems which prompted the truckers' strike.

Shapp said he was "cautiously optimistic" about the prospects for a settlement and William J. Usery, President Nixon's federal mediation chief, abruptly requested a two-hour evening recess, possibly to consult with other federal officials.

But the truckers — demanding immediate relief from higher fuel prices, a ban on quotas at the gas pump and an end to Sunday shutdowns of gas stations — still had not agreed to Shapp's request for a 45-day moratorium.

Bill Corrier, president of Truck Drivers of America, a lobbying agency for independent truckers in 43 states, said the nationwide shutdown of shipping is aimed at the Nixon administration, not the consumer.

"We want the Nixon administration to look at our side of the picture," said Corrier. "If they give us what we want, we will be back at work tomorrow and this country can get on the move."

U.S. Attorney General William B. Saxbe yesterday called on all 50 governors and all law enforcement agencies to recognize an "attempt by independent truck drivers to take over this country" and advised all U.S. attorneys to use whatever means were available to them to put a stop to the shutdown.

Shapp warned Washington conferees that the strike has spawned violence and economic chaos that soon will be felt by every citizen.

As he expressed the warning, new incidents of rock-throwing and gunfire erupted on the nation's highways.

Drivers in Indiana, Iowa, Alabama and Tennessee told police that their rigs were shot at Saturday and Sunday. One truck was injured, two fuel tanker trucks were burned and several arrests made in Ohio.

National Guard officials in Pennsylvania had 2,000 men on active duty to deal with the strike, and Ohio Gov. John J. Gilligan ordered 900 National Guardsmen activated to help maintain order on the highways.

Indiana state police said at least six shots were fired from a car on the northern Indiana toll road near Valparaiso. Two of the shots struck the cab of a truck, but the driver was not injured. It was the sixth instance of shots fired at a truck in Indiana during the current shutdown.

Other energy-related developments: Motorists had the worst gasless Sunday since World War II with more gasoline stations closed in metropolitan areas than at any time since the energy crisis hit. The gas famine was at its worst in the Northeast and in California.

The House Ways and Means Committee opens hearings today that likely will lead to some form of excess profits tax on the oil industry.

A Library of Congress report released Sunday said that neither tax changes nor rising prices are likely to increase existing supplies of oil and gas in the near future.

The Beirut newspaper An Nahar Sunday quoted "informed Arab sources" in Washington as saying the Arab oil embargo on the United States will be lifted at the beginning of March.

Israeli, Syrian forces clash again

Israeli and Syrian forces clashed Sunday for the eighth consecutive day along the Golan Heights cease-fire lines, with Damascus proclaiming a "war of attrition" to cripple the Israeli economy. On the southern front, diplomatic sources in Cairo said Israeli forces would complete the second phase of their withdrawal from the west bank of the Suez Canal today.

Cambodians move to drive out rebels

Cambodian government troops launched two operations Sunday to drive out rebel forces entrenched in the rich farmland region north of Phnom Penh. Heavy fighting also was reported in the rice-growing areas south of the capital. Across the border, the Saigon command reported skirmishes between government and Communist troops in all four military regions over the weekend.

'Greek ship' guerrillas leave vessel

Three masked guerrillas who seized a Greek ship in Karachi Harbor have surrendered the vessel and the two Greek hostages and left on a special flight to a "third country," a Greek government spokesman said yesterday. In Singapore, meanwhile, four Arab and Japanese guerrillas, suspicious of safe conduct promises, sat for another day in their commandeer ferry, surrounded by naval boats.

Subpoena power vote near

From Herald News Services

WASHINGTON — The House decides this week whether it will give sweeping subpoena powers to the Judiciary Committee's impeachment inquiry, including the latitude to demand any material from the White House and testimony by President Nixon.

Observers close to the committee inquiry said the vote on the resolution, tentatively scheduled for Wednesday, could not be interpreted as any indication of the mood of the House on the issue of impeaching Nixon.

The resolution requesting broad subpoena powers was approved by the committee last week on a simple voice vote — indicating bipartisan support for the theory that the panel's historic inquiry must be complete, even to calling the President if necessary.

Vice President Gerald R. Ford said Sunday the subpoena powers should be granted, but he added that the panel has "no right to go on a fishing expedition" when it does request White House tapes and documents.

During an interview on ABC-TV Sunday, special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski said the White House has promised to tell him by today whether it will grant his request for additional tapes and documents.

The decision would be the President's first indication of what he meant when he told Congress last Wednesday night that Jaworski had been provided "all the material that he needs to conclude his investigation."

Meanwhile, details of Nixon's $304.5 billion budget for fiscal 1975 will be revealed today when the massive document is officially handed to Congress, setting the stage for expected new partisan debates over spending priorities.

House Democratic leader Thomas P. O'Neill has already lined up key members of his party to conduct daily speeches on the floor attacking Nixon's proposals in the areas of mass transit aid, housing, education and rural development.

Stuck with banned product? New rules help consumers

by United Press International

The government Sunday published rules under which a consumer usually will be able to get his money back if he is stuck with a product that has been banned as hazardous.

The new rules from the Consumer Product Safety Commission also allow the consumer to recover the cost of returning the product to the store or factory. They require stores to keep lists of banned items that have been sold and to post signs for 120 days, advising customers of the lists and what they must do to get a refund.

Effective March 6, the rules do not guarantee every buyer a refund since the store has the right to demand proof of purchase. If that happens, the commission said, the manufacturer will be encouraged — but not required — to give the buyer his money back.

The amount of money to be refunded under the commission's rules is the purchase price plus tax, but not including transportation or shipping costs or charges for finance, interest and service.

The customer also can collect "reasonable and necessary transportation charges," including what he spends returning the product to the store in his own car, on public transportation or by mail.

Once a product is banned by the commission the manufacturer must notify his wholesalers and retailers of that fact, providing instructions for return or destruction. The retailer then must display the list on the floor or location in the store where the product was sold along with a sign not smaller than 22 by 28 inches, with contrasting background, telling the customer that the list is available.

Astronauts 'walk' to retrieve film

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Skylab 3 astronauts space-walked Sunday for the final time in their nearly-completed record voyage to retrieve rolls of precious pictures of the sun and Comet Kohoutek.

Gerald Carr and Edward Gibson, produced by their bulky spacesuits, worked outside the spacelab for about five hours and 15 minutes. William Pogue stayed inside to control the 113-foot station.

The pilots are to splash down Friday after 84 days in orbit.

They resemble the huts in the TV series "Mash."

Dr. Edward Burchard, the assistant team leader, says Skylab 3 has shown the human body is capable in some areas of staying in space indefinitely — for months or years. But there are danger areas, too, including the loss of calcium content in the bones.

Secondly, the essential question is not how long they can stay in space but what happens to the body when they return to earth and are exposed once more to gravity.

The shipboard physicals will be the most stringent ever given returning astronauts. One will be a neurological examination of their balance and reflexes.

Burchard recalled that Skylab 2 astronaut Jack Lousma awoke on the carrier one night and had to go to the bathroom. On the spaceship he had simply given a slight shove and floated to the head. He sleepily tried the same technique on the ship and fell flat on his face.

• Displaying more of his famed candor Sunday, Sen. Barry Goldwater described President Nixon as "the most complete loner I've ever known" and chided him directly for never consulting Congressional Republicans "until you get your tail in a crack."

Looking ahead to 1976, Goldwater said California Gov. Ronald Reagan is the top candidate for the GOP presidential nomination, followed by Nelson Rockefeller, John Connally and Vice President Gerald Ford in that order. He said that he doesn't think Sen. Edward M. Kennedy will be nominated by the Democrats in '76, adding that Sen. Henry Jackson would be the toughest Democrat to beat.

• Nobel Prize-winning author Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn said Sunday attacks and threats to kill him were day in Moscow that published being undertaken to frighten Soviet citizens into rejecting the truths of his new book, "The Gulag Archipelago," an indictment of the mass Stalinist terror. He said world public opinion was the only thing keeping him from arrest or even being murdered.

• Not all the 10,000 people who came to see Queen Elizabeth "meet the people" on a 20 minute seafaring walk Sunday in Wellington, N.Z., were happy with the visit. A group of Maori protesters held up a banner reading "You are Queen of white New Zealand only" as the Queen, accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh and Prince Charles, walked past without looking at the group and without stopping.

• Former Chief Justice Earl Warren, 82, was reported resting Sunday at the home of his daughter following release from an Inglewood, Calif., hospital for treatment of what his doctor described as "coronary disease."

Arab anti-Semitism deserves protest

"The Jews are accursed by God through the prophets . . . They have deviated from the teachings of Moses and have attempted to murder Jesus Christ . . . They have no connection or right to have any presence in Jerusalem. The Walling Wall is a structure they weep against; another wall can be built for them to weep against."

These words are from a speech made in December and an interview given in November, 1973, by King Faisal of Saudi Arabia. The King is known as the "Protector of Islam."

This title was for several centuries a euphemism for the Arab leader who controlled Mecca and Medina — and who could therefore extract fees from religious pilgrims.

Since "The Protector of Islam" still bars all Jews and all Christians from the cities of Mecca and Medina, the world's nearly 1 billion Christians might do well to contemplate what would happen if he were to gain control of Islam's third holiest city — Jerusalem.

The World's Christians might also ask why their leaders in the Vatican and the World Council of Churches said nothing when the Arab Legion invaded the Old City of Jerusalem in 1947, destroyed the synagogues and for the next 20 years excluded all Jews from even visiting the Walling Wall.

NOW, WHEN THE death ovens of Auschwitz have been cool for less than three decades, the world's Christians should have expected that King Faisal's outburst would have evoked so strong a reaction from the Vatican and the World Council as to be page one throughout the world.

If there was any reaction from either Geneva or Rome — other than ear-splitting silence — it somehow escaped the attention of most of the wire services.

This appalling silence should be encouraging to a wide spectrum of people, including Father Daniel Berrigan — who appears willing to do or say anything just so that he can keep in the headlines.

Last October he addressed an audience of Arabs in Washington and excoriated Israel with such stupendous venom and inaccuracy that fellow liberal Catholic and scholar Michael Novak cited this event as an example of "The New Anti-Semitism" of the far left.

ACROSS THE Potomac near the Arlington Cemetery, George L. Pierce, head of a tax-exempt organization called the National Youth Alliance, was busy publishing such periodicals as "Attack!" and "Blackmail!" The latter is a one-sheet contention that the nation's TV networks as well as "the great majority of the 62,000,000 newspapers published in this country every day" are controlled by "Zionists."

Pierce, the former ideological officer for George Lincoln Rockwell's American Nazi Party, was following the post-1967-pre-oil-embargo Arab line, which goes like: "We as fellow Semites can hardly be anti-Semitic. We don't hate Jews, we just oppose Zionists."

This verbal weaseling is apparently no longer necessary. For Maj. Gen. Idi Amin ("Big Daddy") Dada, Uganda's Moslem dictator, has written the Secretary General of the United Nations to say that he appreciates Hitler's attempts to exterminate the Jews.

STILL ANOTHER Moslem firebrand is Libya's Muammer Qaddafi, whose fellow Arab leaders have reportedly begun to shun him. In his rage at being satirized, Qaddafi recently demanded that unless the Government of Italy had a Jewish editor in Turin fired, he would break off diplomatic relations.

To its everlasting credit, Fiat, the giant automobile manufacturer that owns this editor's paper, has at this writing refused to buckle under to such extortion. But such extortion may well increase — especially if there is no protest of such immorality and anti-Semitism by the leaders of Christianity.

Another effort will be made to designate Childerley as park site

now, and a reason for not just giving in to the park district on the land question, is time. He said that it is imperative that the hospital obtain land for the facility in order to get an application on file with the state by April, when the hospital governing board meets.

He later explained that this date is important because of a pending "certificate of need" law, which is now going through legislative channels. The law has already been passed by the state house of representatives and is now in the state senate.

This law would force a hospital to show a specific need for a hospital in a given area. "As far as I'm concerned, this is a 'kangaroo court,' and would probably show there isn't a need for another hospital in the entire state," Davis said.

Therefore, he added, the hospital must have a site and if park officials or anyone else could recommend an alternate site, hospital officials would be happy to abandon the Childerley site to the park district.

DAVIS THEN WAS presented with maps from the district's real estate consultant, Charles DeBruller and village trustee William Hein, that showed several areas of vacant land that may be used for the hospital. The areas shown by DeBruller are sites definitely available for purchase, while Hein's map just showed vacant land in Wheeling.

With an expression of hope that the hospital can find another tract on which to build, the official meeting ended with five village trustees, hospital representatives, DeBruller and a few park board members going into another room to discuss the sites.

When approached by The Herald, Village Pres. Ted Scanlon said the officials did not want to discuss the sites in public for fear that newspaper articles about the locations would raise the price of land in those areas.

Scanlon also said one of the most important things concerning the hospital is to "keep it in Wheeling."

When asked about the park designation vote tonight, Scanlon and several of the trustees said they will view it with an open mind. They said the 3-3 vote by the plan commission will not be considered as a recommendation or negative vote, as plan commissioners noted at the end of their discussion on the matter several weeks ago.

The trustees also said that they would like to see both the park district and the hospital satisfied in this case. Several added, however, that if it came down to picking between one or the other, it would be a tough decision.

Tonight's board meeting is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

tal, however, involve both Wheeling and Buffalo Grove.

"When we look at the population of the area, for instance, we look at both villages and then determine our needs," he said.

Hospital officials also said that Buffalo Grove was a primary reason for wanting a site in the northwest portion of Wheeling. They said this way the accessibility from Buffalo Grove and other Lake County communities would be easy.

Officials said, however, that at no time have they considered moving the hospital site to Buffalo Grove, since it was Wheeling officials who approached Franklin Boulevard.

Officials also pointed out that the local board of directors will have three Buffalo Grove residents, as well as four from Wheeling.

Currently, a majority of hospital cases in Buffalo Grove are handled by Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights and Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines.

Buffalo Grove to consider annexation of Hank Farm

by JOE FRANZ
Annexation of the 86-acre Hank Farm development in unincorporated Lake County, which was rejected unanimously by the plan commission, will be considered tonight by the village board.

The plan commission two weeks ago voted 5-0 to recommend the village board reject the project. Centex Homes Corp. has asked to build 940 townhouses and condominiums on the site. The Hank Farm is located north of the Chevy Chase County Club.

Along with the Hank Farm, the plan commission also turned down a request for annexation and multi-family zoning for a 12-acre tract to the west and a five-acre commercial area fronting on Milwaukee Avenue.

The plan commission turned down the project primarily because it does not meet the village's planned unit development ordinance in regard to rear and side yard set-back requirements.

THE COMMISSION also opposed annexation because the water and sewer facilities in the development will be provided by Lake County instead of the village.

Having the project serviced by a different system from the rest of the village will create problems, the commission said.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson, however, has said if the village annexes the property, it must by law supply it with water because of provisions in its water bond ordinance. The sewer facilities would be provided by the county, as is the case with Lake County homes that are now in the village.

According to Lake County Public Works Director Robert Deegan, the county already has installed water lines across the property and should supply the water. Deegan opposes annexation of the property to Buffalo Grove.

LARSON SAID he favors annexation because the village is better equipped than Lake County to provide water and other services to the development. Since the project has already been approved under Lake County zoning it can be built even if the village board turns down the annexation request, he said.

If the project is built under county zoning, Larson said it could turn out to be a liability because the village may still be called on to perform some services. By annexing it, the village will at least have some say over the development plan, he added.

The owner of the Hank Farm, prior to giving Centex an option to buy, agreed to donate $39,000 to Aptakisic-Tripp School Dist. 102. Centex, however, refuses to pay an additional $71,000 to $76,000, estimated to be the amount required for schools under a village resolution.

Park Director Stan Crosland said Friday the same resolution requires 13 to 17 acres for "active recreation." Although Centex' park donations have not been determined yet, he said, the firm appears to be several acres short of the requirement.

In addition to the park and school donations, Centex refuses to pay a $100-a-unit-annexation fee, thus the village would lose $94,000 in revenue.

ALTHOUGH NOT required by law, the village has received the fees from almost all recent developers. Centex officials have said the fees are "outside the realm of reasonableness." They have said if the village insists on the fees or other donations, Centex will build the project under county zoning.

Several members of the village board have said the project should not be approved unless Centex agrees to the additional donations. Other members, however, said they are in favor of negotiating for additional donations, but that they will not vote against the project should Centex continue to refuse.

The public hearing on the development will begin at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

Impeach Nixon Committee to meet with Rep. Crane

Impeach Nixon Committee members will meet with U. S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, to make him aware of the impeachment sentiment in his district.

The meeting was agreed to by Crane on Friday after 12 committee and Independent Voters of Illinois members confronted him at a flagpole dedication at Samuel Kirk Developmental Training Center in Palatine. No date has been set for the meeting, but Crane indicated he might not be available until early March.

They sought out Crane to ask for the conference after four weeks of trying to set up a meeting through his staff proved futile, said Anne Holiday, an Impeach Nixon Committee coordinator.

The committee will present Crane with petitions signed by residents of his district calling for Nixon's impeachment at the meeting in an attempt to get the impeachment process under way so the involvement, if any, of President Nixon in recent scandals can be determined.

Crane turned down an invitation from the two groups to represent pro-Nixon forces in a debate on impeachment planned for Feb. 24.

"My position is absolutely neutral," said Crane, because he will be a member of the grand jury which might impeach Nixon.

The building will be open Feb. 7 and Feb. 14 from 7 to 9 p.m. Residents can purchase the stickers then or during regular business hours, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. to noon Saturdays.

Motorists who fail to display stickers by the deadline will be fined $15 and required to purchase a sticker. Stickers are $10 each.

Sheriff's police to get $806,116 in wheel tax

Accumulated county wheel tax revenue totaling $806,116 will be used to furnish the new Cook County Sheriff's Police central headquarters under construction in Maywood.

The money has been kept in an interest-bearing escrow account pending an Illinois Supreme Court decision on the constitutionality of the tax, which was to be levied after Jan. 1, 1972. The court ruled Thursday that the tax is reasonable under the county home-rule powers because most municipalities in the county already levy such a tax.

The Wheel Tax Ordinance revenue act requires income to be spent in the sheriff's department, although after this year the money will be part of the sheriff's budget and the "excess" could be shifted elsewhere in the county budget.

COOK COUNTY Board Pres. George Dunne said the first money will be used in the new sheriff's headquarters in addition to the department's share of the 1974 county budget.

The accumulated account is from residents of unincorporated areas who have purchased the stickers for two years with the understanding the money would be repaid from the escrow account if the tax were ruled unconstitutional.

The first year the tax was collected, 45,900 stickers were issued, bringing that year's account to $873,297. Many motorists chose to ignore the disputed tax in 1973, and the county collected only $130,819 from the sale of 9,500 stickers. So far this year, $545 has been collected.

Motorists who wish to renew their stickers or obtain them for the first time can get applications at county sheriff's stations in the Northwest Suburbs, on Milwaukee Avenue in Niles. The applications are also available at most township offices, according to a spokesman from the county treasurer's office. They can be obtained in person only at the county collector's office, 118 N. Clark St., Room 112, Chicago.

The stickers range from $10 to $15 for cars, depending on size, and up to $95 for trucks. Checks or money orders for the proper amount must be mailed with the applications.

STUDENTS AT EISENHOWER School in Prospect Heights do the Virginia Reel as part of Pioneer Day activities at the school Friday. The celebration culminated the fifth grade class' study of colonial history. Among participants in the day's activities was Julia Jordan, a former history teacher, who demonstrated how to use such colonial relics as a children's loom and a dye pot.

State of Union talk unrealistic

Things have never been better in the United States, if we are to believe much of President Richard Nixon's State of the Union address last Wednesday.

There will be no recession, the President promised. Americans have more spending power, he declared. He's been working on the Middle East oil crisis through personal contacts he commented, and air and water pollution controls are speeding ahead, he said.

Finally, we are to put the Watergate scandals behind us: He declared. "One year of Watergate is too many."

The President's estimate of the condition of this country is lofty, but it certainly is in tune with the realities of American life today. For example:

—There is no recession, for there is full employment. The persons who lost their jobs because of the present energy crisis are merely temporary victims of a minor crisis that will clear up next summer — or next year, or by 1980, or by 1990...

—Real spending power is up, as the President reported to us. It's an illusion that inflation, especially in the area of food purchasing, has far outstripped our ability to buy life's essentials.

—The energy shortage will be near resolution when Nixon's conference on the oil embargo begins. Domestic fuel problems, such as the lack of refineries in this country and the oil company's tendency to invest overseas rather than here, are to be ignored.

—Our air and water is cleaner than it has ever been, even though the president, last year, impounded funds for sewage treatment facilities.

Finally, it's wonderful to know that the Watergate disaster can be put behind us by Nixon. His avowed willingness to cooperate fully and completely with the prosecutors will, of course, assure us that it will be placed behind us.

It's nice to know that an end to the laborious process of justice — investigations, indictments, trials, convictions, and so forth — can be suggested by the Chief Executive.

Never mind that the President could have helped resolve the entire problem a year ago with complete cooperation with the prosecutors. Never mind that Nixon's blanket use of executive privilege in 1973 helped drag this growing crisis of confidence into 1974.

Life has never been better here, and it's all the fault of "propaganda of doom," as the President said on Wednesday. It's nice to find that our problems have such an easy source, and that they are really not OUR problems, after all.

Nixon draws a defender

WASHINGTON — Backstairs at the White House:

It is not true that President Nixon does not get along with his New York socialite son-in-law, Edward Finch Cox, according to other members of the family.

Julie Eisenhower says that Cox, who is married to her sister Tricia, "and my father are very close."

"Ed has been so supportive and great... yet you read these stories that they don't get along," she told a reporter recently.

Julie and her husband David Eisenhower said that three months ago Cox came to the President and offered to quit his job as an up-and-coming Wall Street lawyer in New York to help out on Nixon's burgeoning legal staff, which will be organizing his defense against possible impeachment and other Watergate allegations.

From the time that Cox appeared in the First Family picture, there have been rumors that he and the President did not see eye to eye. Having been a member of Nader's raiders while at Yale University, Cox was at first viewed as the "liberal" in the First Family but he has moved into the conservative corner since his marriage to Tricia.

Several months ago a newspaper columnist suggested in question and answer form that Nixon did not like to dine at the same table with Cox and that they were rarely together at family gatherings.

Members of the Nixon family denied it. This week Cox came out swinging in the President's behalf, labeling John Dean a "coward" and alleging that Dean was only seeking immunity in testifying against Nixon. Dean told the Senate Watergate Committee he believed Nixon had early knowledge of a Watergate cover-up.

Cox also struck out against the press for what he termed "persecution" of the President.

The President's State of the Union address gave members of the First Family the lift they were waiting for and seems to have given them a feeling that they now see the light at the end of the Watergate tunnel.

Aides said that Mrs. Nixon is "coming out of hiding and she's going to start doing things."

The President himself mentioned in the final remarks of his address that 1973 "was not a very easy year for me personally or for my family."

The First Lady through much of 1973 kept out of the public eye. When she did show herself she was subdued, but now she is smiling again and apparently believes the dark clouds are lifting.

Mrs. Nixon is well tuned in to Washington goings on and can work magic behind the scenes when necessary. When Washington Press Club officers asked her to intervene so that Nixon would not deliver his address on Jan. 29, the date they had long scheduled for their congressional dinner, the First Lady went to bat and the President quickly acquiesced. Both of them had often been guests of honor at the Club's dinners, which are annual affairs timed to the opening of Congress.

Muriel Humphrey, who often campaigned alongside her husband, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, in his vice presidential and presidential quests, used to say that the First Lady is to be able to "wave a magic wand."

So it was with some nostalgia that she recently took a VIP tour of the White House to show some of her Minnesota constituents through the mansion. As the wife of a vice president, she was constantly at the White House and it was in a sense like coming home.

She blasts arsonists

To Tom Wellman, chief editorial writer:

I just read your column in the Wheeling Herald regarding the fire in Arlington Heights. I wholeheartedly agree with you that arsonists should be made to view their victims and if luckily there are no victims they should view the fire victims down at County Hospital's burn unit. I have seen a loved one die in the burn unit and the sights there are something I will never forget. The man next to my grandmother was a victim of his own crime. He was a hoodlum arsonist and you might say he got exactly what was coming to him. But he was a human being and suffering terribly. He was burned black from head to toe.

I, too, live in an apartment building. We are pretty lucky that the building is concrete and steel. We have had a very bad fire in the storage area but it was contained in that area. The apartment directly above the fire was not damaged although it took three days for the kitchen floor to cool down.

It is terrible today the fears we have to live with. I live in a very nice apartment complex but vandalism is running rampant. It is hard to tell if it is caused by the youngsters who live in the building or outsiders who make their way in. We are currently forming a parents' association in our complex to provide facilities for our children so that they will stay out of trouble. Unfortunately there are more parents than children who just don't give a damn what the kids are up to.

When I read your article it set me off and I just had to tell you I agree. Mrs. Marie Valentino Wheeling

Reader hits energy editorial

Re: the Herald editorial in the Jan. 14 issue of the Palatine Herald titled, "Where's the federal candor?" As a regular subscriber and sometime reader of your editorials, I strongly object to your sophomoric, grade school approach in discussing the energy problem. Your completely emotional approach in analyzing the reasons and placing blame for the problem did little more than fill up space on what was otherwise a rather informative page in your newspaper. Your editorial certainly stood out in quality lack compared to Bruce Blossat's column which in itself was not a particularly profound display of writing.

Specifically, the newspaper industry (and you) had access to President Nixon's messages to Congress as well as the oil industry publications the last few years regarding the developing energy crisis, but apparently felt more newspapers would be sold by highlighting the media generated "scandals" around us that could be headlined for their spectacular value. It seems to me that reasoned thinking conveyed through well thought out editorials based on all the facts would make a more significant contribution toward a solution to our problem as opposed to the political backbiting, routine Watergate-mouthing trash that is so often exhibited in the daily publications to which we are exposed in our search for truth.

Obviously, this letter reflects disappointment in the editorial quality of a newspaper that over the years has had a reputation for excellence in reporting and community responsibility. I trust this editorial was published through a purely temporary lapse in management alertness.

Tom Wellman's column

'Motorists are gasoline junkies during fuel crisis'

by TOM WELLMAN
Chief Editorial Writer

No one would ever accuse Northwest suburban residents of massive heroin addiction.

Studies have shown, of course, that only a tiny quantity of the killer addictive drug is being peddled out here. Heroin junkies exist in Chicago, and it'll be a long time before it becomes a major social problem here.

But like it or not, we're acting like a nation of junkies during the present fuel crisis, and last week, it got to the point where we were maintaining the powerful fluid right from our gasoline pumps into our overpowered cars.

Herald staff writer Joe Swickard interviewed Lou Brichetto of Lou's Gulf Service in Arlington Heights. Some quotes from Brichetto about motorists.

—"People come out of the woodwork when we turn on the pumps. They smell it."

—"Last night was crazy. People were lined up completely around the block to get in here. Today people are pretty calm but tonight tempers will be short. That's when the trouble starts."

—"People say they're going to punch you. They try to push my boys around. I'm right here in case they really start something. I really think if they had a gun some of them would shoot you." "I'm a little afraid of what they'll do when you tell them we're shutting."

—"Look. They drove right over it (the parkway) to cut in line. It cost me $900 to sod that just last year so I could have a good looking place. And now I've got to do it again."

In the perspective of these out-of-context quotes, these motorists who give Lou Brichetto's people a difficult time are behaving like junkies — junkies whose lives are dependent (they believe) on fuel for their automobile.

Such addiction is understandable, for we all have to feed a gasoline habit. And we are at the mercy of a vicious collection of oil companies whose behavior — and profits — seem designed to penalize the American motorist.

But after hearing Brichetto's description of the perils of running a gas station in 1974, there's the alarming inference that our priorities are out of joint as we panic in line at the gas stations.

Gasoline — and autos — have become our mode of existence. A method of living which has become larger than life itself. It has become as vital to us as air, food or water — or, to the junkie, heroin.

Yet gasoline is not life itself — and we can avoid portions of this crisis, and relax a bit, by adjusting our life styles to this new era of shortages.

One adjustment is a tendency towards working and living in the same community. That's a trend which is already underway in the Northwest suburbs, as a declining percentage of persons now commute every day.

Another adjustment is to realize that bicycles and feet can serve a purpose in modern America — an adjustment which most of us might find quite enjoyable.

Finally, the simple conservation of resources, in such ways as driving smaller cars, is an obvious benefit.

We don't have to be strung out and depressed by the failure to get gasoline. Unless we depend on cars for a living, gasoline and cars shouldn't be a matter of the kind of out-of-proportion hysteria that erupted early this week.

Besides, cutting gasoline consumption just might pass a message along to gasoline refiners and dealers that they can't control and manipulate our lives. That would be the best way of all to control — or kick — the habit.

Two indicted officials leave county posts

Zoner Colitz resigns, planner Phillips suspended by county board president

have difficulty enforcing the suspension of Phillips, a cousin of Stavros. Although Dunne can suspend county Civil Service employees for 29 days without a hearing, the U.S. District Court in Chicago ruled last year that indicted Chicago policemen could not be suspended before trial.

"THERE'S NOTHING we can do," Dunne said, if Phillips obtains a similar court order.

"I hope to serve notice by Monday that they must put him back," Phillips' attorney, Louis Carbonaro, told the Herald. "His county position is not involved in these charges."

Phillips and Colitz are named in one count each in the Wickes extortion. Phillips is charged with extorting the $50,000 from Wickes Dec. 30, 1971 and Colitz is charged with aiding in the extortion.

Less than a month after the alleged payoff, the Wheeling Zoning Board of Appeals approved the Wickes furniture store-warehouse project on Dundee Road. The zoning board vote and quick approval by the village board Feb. 10, 1972 reversed denial of Wickes' zoning petition in May 1971.

"Phillips is just an innocent bystander," his attorney said. "He's Stavros' cousin but he had nothing to do with this."

Following is a detailed accounting of the indictments:

Stavros, 3705 Whirlaway Dr., Northbrook, is charged with nine counts of extortion and one count of conspiracy to commit extortion. He is named in three of the six indictments.

Money allegedly extorted by Stavros totals $111,250, plus a share of $30,000 allegedly paid to both Stavros and Bieber, plus two acres of land in the Chelsea Cove development. He also allegedly obtained by extortion a Miami Beach vacation for Bieber, water and sewer lines for his mother's house, six cases of liquor and subcontracts for Country Service Excavating and Rock Road Construction Co.

Stavros is accused of the Feb. 1970 and Dec. 15, 1970 extortion of $15,000 from Chesterfield Development Corp.; the spring, 1971, extortion of $30,000 from Zale Construction Co.; the March 25, 1971, extortion of $3,250 from Hollywood Builders; and the April, 1971, extortion of $3,000 from Chesterfield Development Corp.

ALSO, THE January, 1973 extortion of $30,000 from Harmony Builders and owner Bernard Kron; the Feb. 10, 1973 extortion of two acres of Chelsea Cove land from Hollywood Builders and owner Jack Netchin; and the Aug. 9, 1972, Sept. 7, 1972 and Dec. 29, 1972 extortion of $30,000 from Northern Illinois Construction Co. and owners Richard Harwood and Ralph Harwood.

Stavros and Bieber are charged with shaking down Meister-Neiberg Co. and owners Al Neiberg and Jerome Meister for $30,000 on Dec. 16, 1972. They are accused of extorting the Miami Beach vacation, the water and sewer lines for Stavros' mother's house and the subcontracts from Ben Pekin, Ben Pekin Corp. and Peachin-Pekin, Inc., in Dec. 1972, and July, 1973.

Bieber faces a total of 14 counts including seven of extortion, two of conspiracy, four of perjury before the grand jury and one of filing a false 1971 income tax return.

He is accused of extorting two $500 bribes from Zale Construction Co. in Dec., 1971 and Dec. 1972; of shaking down subcontractor Tony Marcucci for $1,000 on Nov. 17, 1971; and of extorting $700 from Ceisel-McGuire Industries, Inc., on Feb. 29, 1972.

Excerpts from the transcript of Bieber's testimony before the grand jury indicate that Marcucci paid the alleged $1,000 shakedown to Bieber by slipping him 10 $100 bills under the table at Mr. B's Restaurant, Manchester Drive and Milwaukee Avenue, at about 1:30 p.m. Nov. 17, 1971.

Also mentioned in the testimony transcript is an alleged $50-a-week bribe paid to Bieber by the Server Co., a developer, during October and November, 1971. The indictment charges he lied when denying the alleged $50 weekly payoff. But Bieber was not charged with extortion in connection with the alleged $50 payments by Server.

BIEBER is also accused of perjury in denying he recommended to several developers that they hire the following subcontractors: Wheeling Plumbing, Miller-Powers Co., William Ziegler & Son, Wheeling Decorating, Domas Plumbing and Rock Road Construction Co.

Bieber and Valenza are charged with one count each of extortion and conspiracy to commit extortion in the alleged Wickes furniture shakedown in 1971. Bieber is also accused of lying before the grand jury about the furniture.

The $50,000 allegedly extorted from Wickes by Phillips with Colitz' help is not traced any further than Phillips in the indictment. The federal charges also do not explain how Phillips and Colitz, both county officials, were in a position to extort money in connection with a village zoning matter over which the county had no jurisdiction.

The final indictment ties Stavros, Bieber and former trustee William Hart, 912 Garden Ln., Wheeling, in an alleged conspiracy to commit extortion against Bernard Wasmer, who had purchased Duo Sign Co. from Hart in Sept. 1970. They are charged with one count each of conspiracy.

When the firm was sold, the indictment charges, Hart agreed not to engage in the sign business within 75 miles of Wheeling for a period of 10 years. Later, however, Hart and Valenza formed Nite and Day Sign Co. of Wheeling. The firm continues to sell and install signs with Hart as present owner.

Hart, Stavros and Bieber "used their influence and control of certain official positions in the Village of Wheeling" to keep Wasmer from enforcing the 1970 agreement, the grand jury charged. The alleged conspiracy violated the federal Hobbs Act, according to the indictment.

The transcript of Bieber's allegedly perjured testimony before the grand jury indicates that Hart, Stavros, Bieber and Wasmer met Jan. 18, 1972 at the Clayton House Restaurant, 1090 S. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling, where Wasmer's sign company was discussed.

MICHAEL VALENZA, a former village's environmental control commission trustee, signs his bond release statement in U.S. District Court. Valenza, chairman of the vil-

Indictments didn't surprise residents

These village officials don't give a damn as long as they're fixed up with a good profit."

Elizabeth Arnoux, 333 Mors Ave., said she expects more Wheeling arrests in connection with extortion plots.

"I think there will be a few more arrests and there must be good evidence for the charges they've already made," Mrs. Arnoux said. "I think they should just continue investigating and get all these suburbs cleaned up."

ONE WOMAN said the citizens of Wheeling must accept part of the blame for any shakedowns.

"Any corruption is really the people's fault," she said. "They voted the people in and it was up to them to see everything was kept straight."

Will the investigation and subsequent arrests signal a new era of citizen involvement in Wheeling to prevent future corruption? Not likely, the woman believes.

"People should start attending more meetings, but I doubt if they will," she said. "That's why we have corruption — because nobody gets out. I don't know if I'll personally become more active in village government, but I'm going to try to be a better citizen and know what's going on."

Complex clubs gum up game

Oswald: "One of the modern developments is the use of an artificial forcing one-club bid. We have Neapolitan, Roman, Precision, Orange, Blue-Team and what-have-you clubs galore."

Jim: "It may well be that a forcing-club convention gives an expert with a developed partnership an advantage. The people who try to sell their club systems to the public claim that it is simpler than standard American. Nothing could be farther from the truth."

Oswald: "Today's hand illustrates one weakness of forcing-club systems. The bidding in the box is standard American."

Jim: "The bidding in all normal-club systems would start with the same one spade opening and would end right there."

Oswald: "The 4-2 spade break does not keep South from making four hearts with an overtrick. It holds the one spade declarers to three."

Jim: "It is quite likely that some standard-American bidders would miss the heart game but at least they would all get into the heart contract while club bidders would be left in spades. Of course, we can show hands where club bidders reach good games that standard bidders miss. No bidding system is perfect."

Bypass surgery needed when fatty cholesterol clogs arterial walls

Would you kindly inform us of the procedure and ramifications of the "bypass" on an artery from the abdomen down the leg?

My husband has been told that he is suffering from atherosclerosis and is in the process of getting an appointment with a specialist in this field. He suffers tremendous pain in his back, buttocks, groin and down his right leg.

In selected patients this is one of the more successful operations. It is a wonderful example of some of the great advances that have occurred in medicine in the past 20 years.

I do not know what is the cause of your husband's pain. Many things other than disease of the arteries can cause pain of that nature. Assuming your statement is correct and that he needs the operation, such a procedure can be of tremendous help.

Particularly as a person gets older

by Dr. Lawrence E. Lamb

there is often an accumulation of fatty cholesterol material in the walls of arteries. This is the same process that occurs in the heart and causes heart attacks. If enough accumulates, it can block the opening in the artery. When an artery in the abdomen or upper thigh is affected, as it narrows, the circulation becomes so poor it affects the function of the part of the body depending on that artery for blood. Often such a person may have trouble walking because of pain.

WHEN THE AREA blocked is limited to one area of the artery system, the surgeon can make a detour or bypass around the obstruction. He uses tubes made of synthetic material and sews in one open end above the obstruction and the other open end below the obstruction. In this way the blood can flow through the detour around the obstruction. The tubes used for the bypass can be adapted to the size needed.

The synthetic tubes undergo changes and cells grow inside the tube so that the lining is eventually just like an ordinary artery.

The operation itself is simple. Not everyone who has obstructed arteries, however, is a candidate for the procedure. The fatty deposits may accumulate the entire length of an artery, say in the region of the thigh all the way down to the smallest arteries in the foot. When this happens, it is a dead-end street. There are no nice open arteries below the obstruction to attach that open end of the synthetic tube to. So the area of involvement must be limited to an area that can be bypassed by the graft.

THE SURGERY itself is fairly simple with modern devices. There are usually excellent results. Recovery is rapid, and the stay in the hospital in uncomplicated cases is usually short.

In deciding who can have such surgery, the doctor will need to examine the circulation in the area to see if the disease is really localized to an area that can be bypassed. Because this same disease does affect the heart, commonly he will want to be sure the patient's heart is strong enough to tolerate the surgery.

Witch discusses her faith

A religion of the wise, not the wicked

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Bonnie Kulda is a witch. I was reared a Baptist and several of my friends are Methodists. But you'd never know that by looking at us.

Neither does Bonnie resemble a hollow-eyed, toothless old crone with a prominent beak nose. That's Halloween imagery in typical Hollywood style.

Bonnie is, in fact, a blond Dane and her claim to the title of witch is disappointing to those persons who stand in awe of black magic and Satan worship.

Mrs. Kulda's religion identifies all members of the faith as witches. She practices witchcraft, the ancient pre-Christian occult religion which in Europe was formerly known as "wicca" or "craft of the wise."

THE ASSOCIATION of witchcraft with evil and sorcery, which became so prevalent during one period in U.S. history that witches were burned at the stake, issued from fear, hysteria and too much bad press in Bonnie Kulda's opinion.

Even today, members of the ancient religion do not seek out new converts for fear of additional ridicule and misunderstanding. They are content to remain obscure though the present focus on the supernatural and occult, heralded by such movies as "The Exorcist," is again beginning to call attention to witchcraft — for all the wrong reasons.

Part of the problem is that anything considered as occult arouses much suspicion though "occultism really is just the seeking of knowledge beyond the range of ordinary perception," explained Bonnie.

PRACTITIONERS of witchcraft believe in one Supreme Being, an unknown cosmic force which is subdivided into two energy forces: Horned god or male force, mother goddess or female force. How they are referred to is not particularly important, said Bonnie.

"We don't worship them as deities. Rather we identify them as energy sources which can help us to raise ourselves to a higher level of consciousness."

Like other forms of religion seeking spiritual enlightenment, witchcraft relies heavily on the philosophy of reincarnation, the constant renewal of the spirit through a series of physical forms, each coming a little nearer to the perfection contained within the Godhead itself.

"A DIFFERENT path to the same end" is how Bonnie describes witchcraft. And she emphasizes that witches do not believe in Satanism.

"The devil is a Christian invention while wicca, which is a pre-Christian, pre-Judaic religion, traces its origins back to the wiseman of ancient paganism who did not believe in the devil," said Bonnie.

Paganism originally meant "the religion of the country people."

"The horned god or male primal force has been given the wrong connotation by the Christian faith," continued Mrs. Kulda.

"Anything that looked the least big supernatural or magical or could be misconstrued by the more orthodox religions was once blown all out of proportion and even feared by other faiths," said Bonnie. That is what triggered the brutal destruction of witches even in this country, she believes.

SYBIL LEEK, a well-known medium and witch, suggests in one of her books that witches were not necessarily evil, but did happen to own some choice bits of land around Salem. After a witch was burned, her property was nicely carved up by either the church or a local landowner.

"Witch-hunting was a very profitable business," says Miss Leek.

Though Bonnie has been a practicing witch for only five years, she was aware of the religion at a very early age. She knew her grandmother had been a witch, and is convinced that in prior lives she herself practiced the religion. "When one disciplines himself, it is possible to recall past lives," she said.

Unable to find substance in any of the Christian faiths, she determined to learn more about witchcraft. Not aware of any practicing covens in the Chicago area, she first wrote to England where witchcraft originated and still is more widely accepted. She received the address of a group who practice in a private residence on the near north side.

BONNIE DISTINGUISHES witchcraft from other forms of religion because "there is no worship involved. It is something you live, something that can individually work for you."

"So many people are really disappointed when they find out what witchcraft really is. There is no naked dancing in the middle of the night or sacrificing of babies," she became serious. "And we don't promote the usage of any drugs."

But Bonnie admits that like any organization there are bound to be a few "black sheep," and it is these outcasts who turn their energies to black magic and thus receive all the publicity.

Much like Catholicism, witchcraft is built on a hierarchy. Individual covens are led by a priest and high priestess who obtain their titles and distinction through heredity, study and training. Being from a long line of witches is worthy of a great deal of esteem by other members of the faith, she said.

"IT IS ONE OF THE few religions I am aware of that puts great emphasis on women as spiritual leaders," added Bonnie.

Though certain superstitions have been fabricated throughout the ages concerning wicca, others hold some truth. Take Friday the 13th. It appears in many different facets of witchcraft and is, indeed, a very lucky number for witches.

(Mrs. Kulda, a resident of suburban Bolingbrook, lectures on witchcraft and has appeared in this area before the Harper Faculty Wives. The coven to which she belongs on Chicago's near northside is the closest practicing group to the northwest suburbs. Anyone wishing more information may call Gene Campbell, 394-2300, Ex 252.)

Ruth Downs' needlepoint

She's keeping people in stitches

by GAY PAULEY

Ruth Downs could lean back and enjoy the carefree life on East Street in Carefree, Ariz.

Instead, the wife of Hugh Downs, the television personality, film producer and author, heads up a brand new business putting people in stitches. Mrs. Downs is the latest to capitalize on the needlepoint epidemic sweeping the country.

One year ago, Mrs. Downs opened a needlepoint shop in Carefree ("population about 200"). Today, she and her partner, Gary Jones, employ eight full-time artists who paint their designs on canvas, plus the women in the area who do stitching for the shop in their homes.

Apparently the opening of Ruth Downs, Ltd. couldn't have been timelier. Already her regular customers range through Arizona and as far away as New York and California.

"We have a Colorado woman who'll call and order $1,000 of canvas and yarn at a time," she said. "That's a lot of needlepoint."

MRS. DOWNS SELLS from her own shop, through selected other outlets, by direct mail, and soon the 11 stores of Marshall Field also will offer her needlepoint designs.

(She is making personal appearances to introduce her needlepoint designs in this area this month. She will be in the art needlework section of the Field store downtown between 1:30 and 3 p.m. next Monday and at the Woodfield store between 2 and 3:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 15. Other suburban appearances are scheduled at Hawthorn Center, Oakbrook and Old Orchard.)

For brunette Ruth Downs, it was a case of a hobby converted to business.

"I was always interested in needlework," she said recently. "My mother taught me embroidery when I was small. We had a first and second grade teacher who would take a couple of hours sometime during the week to teach needlework. I used to knit and crochet too. I guess if you start early enough, it's always with you."

She began doing needlepoint about 15 years ago when her husband was host on the network television show "Today." (He also was featured on the "Tonight" and "Home" shows.)

THE DOWNSES departed New York for Carefree four years ago. "Hugh sort of plans his life in 10-year segments," she said. He now is writing books and has just completed a film on barnstorming pilots, based on the book "Nothing by Chance" by Richard Bach. Bach also wrote the best-selling "Jonathan Livingston Seagull."

Articles for needlepointing have come a long way from the days when it was used to cover footstools or spell out mottoes on the walls such as "What Is Home Without a Mother."

Today's stitchers make practically anything — rugs, tapestries, fire screen covers, loafers, tennis racquet covers, eyeglass cases, pillows, luggage, serving mats, purses — you name it.

Many of the famous have done needlepoint through the years. The late Duke of Windsor and Sweden's late King Gustaf were stitchers.

Betty Furness, Mary Martin, Mary Tyler Moore and Sylvia Sydney are experts. And the Misses Martin and Sydney have written books on the art.

So has Roosevelt (Rosey) Grier, the former professional football star.

MRS. DOWNS SAID may more men are taking up the needle — "no longer an art they hide in the closet. We have five doctors who have taken lessons at our shop. We know one gynecologist who carries his needlepoint in his medical bag."

Her husband, she said, sometimes comes up with designs and also stitches "although he knows only about two."

What is the fascination of needlepoint? Mrs. Downs figures that in our mechanized age people wish to "create something beautiful."

"It's relaxing, a marvelous pick-up work (You can do needlepoint while talking, watching television), it's useful, it lasts forever, and it's also very valuable."

"One woman I know who just finished a 4 by 5 foot rug had it appraised for insurance purposes. It was worth $7,000." (United Press International)

Toe and sympathy

A short while ago I was sitting in a doctor's waiting room about to be called in for my appointment for a Pap test. I didn't know how to tell the doctor that at that moment I was more concerned about my big toe than the appointed exam.

One hour before my appointment I dropped a 28-pound slab of wax on my toe. I hobbled into the doctor's office thankful that he is a G.P. and confident that he wouldn't laugh when I asked him to look at my toe. I was wrong. He laughed.

It didn't take me long to discover that everyone laughs at a broken toe. Broken elbows, fingers, fibulae and tibiae evoke all kinds of sympathy, but broken toes provoke all kinds of laughs.

WHILE SITTING soaking my toe in Scotch (a tough trick with an elevated foot), I had an opportunity to get to the bottom of the reason for broken-toe mirth. I concluded that the explanation for such tragedies getting laughs is that they seem to occur under ridiculous circumstances. Once a friend of mine broke a toe when she ran into a door as her husband was snapping her with a dish towel. Another acquaintance collided in the dark with a vacuum sweeper she had left in the hall before she went to bed. My accident happened during a school candle-making project.

To my knowledge no one has been known to break a toe while skiing, rescuing a cat from a tree or leaping tall buildings in a single bound. These are all activities pursued by heroes. Well, at least they have some glamor attached to them.

But I don't think I need glamor to go with my broken bone. I would be satisfied with a little sympathy. A friend of mine who is a nurse was with me when the accident happened. She not only laughed but told me there was nothing that could be done for the toe. When the doctor looked at it — and laughed — he said there was nothing he could do but tape it to the next toe. From his attitude I guessed this treatment was mainly to keep the broken toe from getting in the way of more important things.

UNTIL THIS injury improves, I have vowed to elevate broken toe sufferers in the eyes of the world. I will spend my time finding and spreading the stories of people who have overcome broken toes to lead useful and fulfilled lives. I will proclaim the good news of those, who, because of broken toes, have found more meaning to their existence.

And, while I'm at it, before it is too late, I will discover exactly how they kept their socks from sticking to the tape.

standing, school activities, community involvement, maturity and sincerity.

A scarf can transform an outfit

Are you as sick and tired of your winter wardrobe as I am — already? Do you wander about the apparel shops and drool at the new, sparkling, and colorful spring line-up, but hold off buying because warmer weather is a long way off?

The doldrums of mid-winter have hit, but we're stuck with the long cold season and must make the best of it.

Why not brighten up a dress, shirt, sweater or even your head with a scarf? Tie one on for a perfect wardrobe extender. To snap up your worn-over-and-over clothes, there are neckline tie tricks galore.

For the tailored haberdasher look, there is the stock tie, an easy fill-in with a handsome effect. Using a large square scarf, bias-band-fold it, wrap it around your neck twice loop over once lightly and tuck it into your neckline.

WITH THE NEW bulky sweaters, try the long oblong scarf. Start in the front and double around your neck. Just let the ends hang up front and move with you for the casual look.

For the old standby, the shirtdress, take a square scarf, double it around the neck twice and knot it. It will add to the neckline interest of any dress.

There are a multitude of sizes, shapes

Fashion

by Karen

and colors available today in scarves. All it takes is a little practice in front of the mirror.

Jean-minded is the western loop, again done via the bias-band fold, knotted casually to one side for the soft touch, either with dresses, shirts or trouser combos. Try the butterfly, a floppy, flirty pouf that looks trickier than it actually is. Just turn a square to its reverse side, knot it dead center, flip back to the front and tie around the neck with the knot to the rear.

HATS ARE BACK so who not try the new tie-ons with scarves. For the head-covering cap look, tie an oblong about the head, twist and braid both ends into one single tight strand and curl from the bottom up to form a flat rosette over one ear.

To create a hood, particularly effective in covering a late-season hairdo, fold under one third of an outside square, then fold into a point, roll the scarf up to the point, place on the head and tie under the chin.

There are many, many more scarf tricks and you can probably just make up some of your own. But if you're in the mood to spiff up your closet has-beens, take advantage of this fashion slight of hand. With the myriad of scarf patterns and colors offered, tie one on.

ASSEMBLING INFO KITS on mental health and retardation completes the service project undertaken a year ago by Arlington Heights Junior Woman's Club. First, the women established a local resource library, then collected pertinent data for the kits, which are now available free of charge in the community. Mrs. James Johnson, Mrs. Larry Wendt, Mrs. Carl Kramer and Mrs. Robert Steinke helped to prepare them for distribution.

Mental health kits ready

They're ready!

The information kits concerning mental health and retardation which were compiled by the Arlington Heights Junior Woman's Club are now ready for distribution.

The kits include a bibliography and pertinent pamphlets on the areas of mental health and retardation, as well as the telephone numbers of area physicians. They are available for parents, students and laymen from various doctors in the community at Northwest Community Hospital, at the local library and area schools for the handicapped. These include Countryside Center for the Handicapped, Samuel Kirk School and Clearbrook Center.

New people moving into the community will receive a brochure telling about the information kits when they receive their Welcome Wagon kits.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Junior Woman's Club has been working more than a year on this two-part community project.

The first part of the project involved the establishment of a local resource library. Juniors raised almost $1,000 with which to purchase books on mental health and retardation and arranged with the Arlington Heights Memorial Library to house them. The books may be taken out by anyone interested.

The second phase of the project involved gathering materials for the information kits and then telling the public where the kits can be obtained. They are free of charge.

Benefits of pasteurization outweigh loss of vitamin C

Dear Dorothy: I have a cousin who is all-out on health foods. She says a good case of overprocessing in foods is pasteurization of milk. She tells me pasteurizing milk reduces the amount of vitamin C by about 20 per cent. Is this right? —Maryanne Boxell

She's right about the reduction of vitamin C, but one doesn't drink milk to get vitamin C. There are plenty of foods that are far better sources for C. The benefits from pasteurizing milk are so many and so solid I don't think this type of "propaganda" for health foods makes good sense, in my view.

Dear Dorothy: The moral of this is not to judge traveling bags by their size. Wanting one for short trips, I picked out one the perfect size to fit under an airplane seat, and to save on skycap tips and such. But on my first trip I found myself struggling. Later on weighing it, I found it just as heavy as my large bag. My son found a use for the bag and you can bet your life the replacement bag I picked was carefully weighed as well as measured.

No trick — hold the iron on the spot for 30 seconds without moving it. Then press around the edges of the tape to complete the seal.

Dear Dorothy: I've just found a new use for 0000 steel wool, which I keep around all the time. I find it's great for getting the soap film off the shower stall walls.

Beauty contest put-on to feature Phyllis Diller

DuBrow on TV

by Rick DuBrow

HOLLYWOOD — Notes to watch television by:

A spoof of beauty contests is set for ABC-TV's late-night series Feb. 13 when Steve Allen emcees "The Unofficial Miss Las Vegas Showgirl Beauty Pageant," with Phyllis Diller as color commentator... ABC-TV says the 90-minute outing will emanate from the Tropicana Hotel in Las Vegas, and adds:

Liza Minnelli and Charles Aznavour, the noted French singer-composer-actor, team up in an hour NBC-TV musical special April 30, with the broadcast originating at London's Rainbow Theater.

Frank Sinatra will be the host of CBS-TV's March 18, 90-minute presentation in which James Cagney is saluted by the American Film Institute.

NBC-TV's middle-of-the night talk series, "Tomorrow," hasn't had a studio audience while broadcasting from its home base at the network's Burbank, Calif., facilities... But the show's recent, successful group of programs from New York City did include studio audiences, and now the series is going to have such audiences at Burbank as well, starting next week.

Thus coming Sunday's CBS-TV drama special "The Migrants," dealing with a family of poor, itinerant farm workers, is a disappointment... Taken from a Tennessee Williams story and adapted by Lanford Wilson, the production only succeeds in being as tedious as the existence it depicts, and the mere photographing of conditions does not automatically qualify as art... Cloris Leachman is solid as the boy's mother, and Ron Howard is believable as the young man, but the drama lacks impact in its structure, its pacing and the presentation of its basic conflict.

"All in the Family" is back in the top spot in the latest national television ratings... "Happy Days," ABC-TV's new comedy series about a 1960s high school boy, his family and friends, has knocked its head-on competitor, CBS-TV's "Maude," out of its usual lofty position in the statistical rankings.

"The Ox-Bow Incident." (1943) Classic Western tale of mob rule, in which three innocent men are tracked down and lynched as killers. Henry Fonda, Dana Andrews, Henry Morgan. 90 minutes. 10:30 p.m. Channel 9.

turned marshal who has to quash a bad guy one last time. Two hours. 10:30 p.m. Channel 2.

Forest View girls take state title in bowling!

Welcome home, champs. State champs, that is!

Forest View's bowling team, champion of the Mid-Suburban League and district tournament, landed the biggest prize of them all Saturday in Peoria.

Coach Diane Tomaino's talented Forest View girls rolled a 1532 to overwhelm Hoopston East Lynn for the team title in the second annual Illinois High School Association Girls Bowling Championships. Hoopston had 1440.

Schaumburg, runnerup in the Mid-Suburban in total points to Forest View, and also a district champ, took third place in the state by downing Mount Morris 1600 to 1560. Schaumburg was second in the state to Abingdon last year.

But Forest View was the big story, just as they have been all year. One hundred and seventeen schools started out in the girls tourney series, but only one could claim to be No. 1.

Nancy Lachus, who averaged 152 in the conference with a high game of 175 and high series of 490, rolled a 206 game and 342 series to spark the championship effort in Peoria.

Nancy had only the third leading average on this powerful Forest View entry heading into the tourney, but she responded to the pressure.

Other scores for the new champions were a 335 (170-156) by Michele Ruggiero; 288 (151-137) by Patty Russo; 284 (129-155) by Dale Smart; and 283 (148-135) by Terri Ulrich.

What made that championship performance even more impressive was the way girls picked each other up throughout the tourney.

Michele Ruggiero, for example, had only seventh leading team average heading into the state tourney, but she came through with the second best total in the key match with Hoopston. Nancy Lachus didn't throw any 200s in the league, but she had a 206 when it counted Saturday.

Forest View gained the championship spot with a 1567 to 1510 victory over Mount Morris earlier Saturday, while Hoopston East Lynn earned its spot with a 1419 to 1393 semi-final win over Schaumburg.

The best game of the two-day tournament was a 219 rolled by Venetia Orcutt of LaSalle-Peru.

The girls who contributed to the Forest View performance throughout the 1973-74 season were Terri Ulrich, Patty Russo, Nancy Lachus, Andy Dziem, Dale Smart, Marianne Kerekes, Michele Ruggiero, Donna Wolanski, Nancy Friberg, Deanna DeMares, and Kathy Klier.

January saw Super Bowl VIII and Super Fight II on the national sports scene. Game III.

Locally, the first day of February saw what might be referred to as Super

The Dolphins proved to be the best team in pro football; Muhammad Ali showed he was better than Joe Frazier. But who is the best between Arlington and Wheeling? Only Super Game IV will ultimately decide that Herald area question.

The Cardinals played host to the Wildcats Friday night in what promised to be a classic battle of traditional rivals. It didn't turn out that way.

A back injury to Wheeling leaper Bill Pickler just before the half made it a different ball game. Without his shooting and rebounding ability, Arlington wasn't tested to the fullest. In command all the way, the Cardinals won 72-60.

"It's going to be a very interesting next three weeks," said George Zigman. Arlington's coach was pleased that his team had won, taking over a share of first place in the process.

Former leader Wheeling, Arlington and Hersey now jam the top spot in the North Division of the Mid-Suburban League with 8-2 records. Over the next three weeks both the 'Cats and the Cards must face the Huskies before a divisional champ can be found to play Conant.

Arlington and Wheeling — foes in a rare four-game matchup last season — may meet again for Super Game IV. If both win in the Forest View Regional, they'll have to play for the title again. Wheeling coach Ted Ecker is already looking forward to it.

"Of course I want to play 'em again," he said. "If we're going to do anything in the tournament, we're going to have to play 'em again."

Ecker and his talented team have a motive for a fourth meeting — seeing what Wheeling can do if Pickler can go the distance. The 6-foot-4½ forward was enjoying his best shooting night from the field (6 of 7 shots) when he fell hard just before the half.

Pickler was removed from the game after hurting his back. He was taken to Northwest Community Hospital where his injury was diagnosed as a deep HEADING FOR DISASTER is soaring Bill Pickler of Wheeling. The high-jumping Wildcat had his legs knocked out from under him after this leap, falling hard on his lower back Friday night against Arlington. He had to leave the game, taking his team's momentum with him. Doug Betters (54), Jeff Cleveland (24) and Dan Donahue proved too tough to handle as Arlington won 72-60. Wildcat teammate Bob Westrich appears to be falling into Pickler.

Three North contenders boast identical 8-2 marks

by ALAN SUTTON
Prolific, awesome, super, spectacular, powerful, dominating, great, sensational. The list of adjectives to describe the basketball performance by Dave Corzine, Hersey High's 6-foot-11-inch center, Friday night could go on. But there's only one word that will do the job, so throw all the others away. The word — BIG.

Corzine, the afro-coiffured Huskie who resembles the Chicago Bulls' Dennis Awrey, scored 44 points to lead Hersey to a 72-65 victory over scrappy Palatine at the Huskies' gymnasium. That's big.

By scoring 44, Corzine ran up his Mid-Suburban League all-time scoring record to 806 points. That's big.

Corzine, picking up from Tuesday night's eight-for-eight shooting from the field against Rolling Meadows, took an incredible 29 shots, making a more incredible 26 of them for a mark of 70 per cent. That's big.

He also grabbed 13 rebounds, came up with timely assists and, when Palatine pulled close to Hersey in the third quarter, Corzine managed to score 14 of his team's 18 points in the period, keeping the Pirates at bay. That's big.

And with Arlington's victory over Wheeling, Hersey came up tied for the MSL North division lead with an 8-2 record. Big? You bet.

Since the dunk is outlawed in high school basketball, it's easy to assume that Corzine, who takes a lot of verbal abuse because of his size, fattened up on plenty of Bill Walton-type lay-ins and hook shots. Not so.

Instead, Corzine, forced away from the basket by Palatine's Scott Cole, collected his 44 on numerous turnaround jump shots in the 12 to 15 foot range.

"I don't think anybody else could have forced him out so far," Palatine Coach Ron Finrock said. "I'm sure if we would have held him to 30 points we would've won. Cole did an outstanding job on him."

Roger Steingraber, Hersey's coach, surprisingly was pleased the way his big man handled the scoring burden for the Huskies.

"I wanted Dave to take all those shots. It's the first time he's pumped them in from the outside like that," Steingraber said.

But the Hersey coach was a little disappointed with the performance of the rest of his players. "My kids just weren't fired up."

Turnovers and traveling violations dominated first-quarter action as Hersey took a 16-12 lead and Corzine worked some bad shots out of his system.

Then the Huskies took command in the second period as Corzine began hitting for a 24-14 lead. Palatine pressed and pulled to within 32-26 at the half.

Part of Palatine's problem in the first half was Mark Mara who had only six points — he had been averaging 21.2 points in his last five games. But it was his three-point play that pulled the Pirates to a 40-40 tie early in the third

Prospect shocks Conant; Black hits the clincher

by JIM COOK

Al Black is the best free-throw shooter on Prospect's basketball team — in practice, anyway.

Through the Knights' first 16 games, however, the 6-foot-1 junior converted just 29 while missing 23. He erred on his only charity attempt "during" the game against Conant Friday night, but with the clock showing 0:00 in overtime, he reverted to his practice style and calmly swished the first half of a one-and-one situation.

He never shot the bonus. Instead, Black was mobbed by his teammates and fans who hoisted him on their shoulders. From that advantageous position, he was able to read the scoreboard: Prospect 49, Conant 48.

"I don't know what it is about shooting free throws during a game," Black, whose flushed face and perspiration-soaked uniform were still absorbing pats on the back, admitted.

"Thursday, I made 47 to 50 (free throws) in our drill. I'm usually right around there all the time. Sure, I heard the crowd and the noise, but it didn't bother me that much."

Perhaps even more ironic than Black's bullseye "after" the game was that it marked the only free throw Prospect converted all night! The Knights went 6-for-6 from the line for the entire 35 minutes.

"One free throw," Prospect head coach disbelievably repeated. "I knew we didn't make that many, but I thought we had more than one. I guess we won't be greedy."

The disappointment was a jolt for the state-ranked Cougars who had been cruising through the Mid-Suburban League at a 9-0 clip.

"I'm sure the game taught us something," Conant coach Dick Redlinger said. "It all depends on how the kids accept it. When I saw Black going to the free-throw line, I started heading for the dressing room. Even though he missed that technical shot earlier in the game, I knew he's their best shooter. Prospect was much more aggressive tonight. They played a nice ball game."

The drama, which was prevalent throughout the see-saw contest, reached a climax during the final minute of regulation play. With the score deadlocked at 46, Prospect, holding the ball for one last shot, committed a back-court turnover and Conant took charge.

Whittling the clock down from 30 seconds, the Cougars began penetrating during the final 10 ticks and when Tom Bowen broke free on the weak side and went up for a layup, the game appeared over.

But Prospect's 6-foot-9 Paul Withey interrupted the flight of the ball with a crucial block with :03 remaining. The clock ran out as Knight Bob Thompson arched a three-quarter court bomb muscle bruise. He didn't have to stay over night.

"He was playing a whole of a ball game in the first half," said Ecker. "When he was out, there was no contest on the boards. He's our best rebounder. They only had to worry about one (George Kange)."

Arlington fans will say that the Cardinals would have won no matter what; Wheeling fans will counter with a wait 'til the state tournament and then you'll see.

Zigman said he hated to see "one of the best forwards in the conference" taken from the game like that. However, he pointed out that in the two teams' second meeting — Super Game II — a slightly similar thing occurred. Arlington star center Dan Donahue only played about half the game because of a badly pulled leg muscle.

The Cardinals' lost that one in overtime, 60-59. "So it seems things tend to even themselves out," said Zigman.

"I thought Ted's kids gave up a helluva scrap. I also thought we played one of the better games of the year. At times our passing was right on the money."

Donahue, a 6-10, 205-pound senior, was on the receiving end of quite a few passes that led to 11 baskets and a game high 27 points. Arlington's potential all-state candidate also had 17 rebounds, 11 off the defensive boards. Still, Zigman agreed that he wasn't the star this night.

"Our big redhead was the man tonight," said the Card coach of Doug Batters.

Ecker agreed: "He's the guy that really hurt us."

Usually playing in the shadow of teammates like Jeff Cleveland, and Donahue, the 6-4, 225-pound forward really asserted himself. Seemingly ignored by Wheeling on defense, he took advantage of some open shots, hitting on three straight in the first quarter. After a scoreless period, he poured in 11 in the second half.

Batters finished with eight of 10 from the floor and 17 points. Known as a rebounder first and a scorer second, he reversed that order somewhat. Zigman was particularly impressed by his aggressiveness on the offensive boards where he "kept the ball alive."

Behind Batters' fast first quarter start, the Cards jumped out to a 10-0 lead, leading 18-10 at the quarter break. They went on top by a 25-12 score early in the second period, looking like they did in the first meeting — Super Game I — which ended in a romp, 64-45.

Then Wheeling stormed back, outscoring the Cards 13-4. During that streak, Pickler hit three straight. With the score 29-25, he soared and then crashed. So did Wheeling's momentum.

"We had kind of turned things around right there," said Ecker. "We were closing the gap..."

Arlington reopened the gap to about 10 points in the second half and maintained it. Playing a big part were Steve Loughman, Jerry DeSimone and Cleveland with 8, 7 and 6 assists, respectively. Cleveland and DeSimone had 10 points each.

Both teams shot around 50 per cent with Arlington holding a big 32-22 edge in rebounding.

Super Game IV almost inevitably awaits both teams in March.

ISA might revamp tomorrow; Suburban League dead

by MIKE KLEIN
The historic Suburban League, Chicago's dominant prep athletic conference since 1928, will be readied for morticians Tuesday when Inter-Suburban Association (ISA) superintendents meet at noon in Arlington Heights.

Little, if any, opposition is expected and not even Suburban League members seem dismayed at the impending death of their 46-year old conference.

"I say great! That'd be just wonderful," remarked Leo Samuelson, athletic director at Evanston High School, one of the league's charter members.

"It's the only thing to do," he said, "and if the superintendents follow through, they should be commended."

Tuesday's meeting at the Brass Rail restaurant should not exceed two hours. It will be directed by ISA chairman Karl Plath, superintendent of Highland Park and Deerfield high schools.

"Each school district is spending a great deal of time in considering this matter," Plath said. "They are very hopeful we will get a solution on Tuesday."

Talk of a huge ISA realignment is not new. Last Oct. 25, the Herald reported a Major ISA shake-up was in the offing. But then, the headline read: "Suburban League to expand."

One plan would have transferred Maines East and South to the Suburban League with Maine West joining the West Suburban. All such thought has apparently been shelved.

Instead, Maine South athletic director Bernie Brady, Evanston's Samuelson and many others have said the six Suburban League schools will be apportioned between the Central and West Suburban conferences.

Evanston, New Trier East and Waukegan West will plug into the CSL. New West Suburban members will be Proviso East, Oak Park and Morton East.

A seventh school, yet unopened Waukegan West, will presumably join the CSL, giving it two divisions of seven and eight schools apiece.

Waukegan West is the offshoot of old Waukegan High School, now renamed Waukegan East. West will open next fall with 1,931 students and no senior class.

"We have asked that both be placed in the same conference," said Waukegan athletic director Jack Miller. "From our standpoint, one couldn't look down on the other and say, 'Hey, I'm in a better league than you are.'"

"When you split a community down the middle, you create a civil war," Miller said. "We've got to try to eliminate all the problems we can."

Many sources have recently told the Herald that an adjustment would certainly be made for the 1975-76 school year. Now it appears that move will be rushed along.

The shift will cut down the number of ISA conferences from five to four, the others being the Des Plaines Valley and Mid-Suburban leagues.

Some persons, including Waukegan's Miller, have said all eight Dist. 214 schools intend to withdraw from the Mid-Suburban and form their own conference. That was heartily dismissed by Dist. 214 Supt. Ed Gilbert.

"I'm not saying it isn't talked about and it could have some merits, but we're not proceeding on any course in that direction," Gilbert claimed. He pledged firm cooperation with Dist. 211 Supt. Richard Koize "on any realignment that could change the Mid-Suburban."

The eight-team Des Plaines Valley does not require change but West Suburban schools have been clamoring for an eighth school since Maine East withdrew after the 1971-72 school year.

"What we want to do is keep the Des Plaines Valley and Mid-Suburban intact. Don't rock the boat over there," said Evanston's Samuelson.

"Only boat rocking we've got is over here and with the West Suburban. If we can satisfy those people, then we've done something good."

Shifts in population, travel times for the Suburban League, girls' sports and the state football playoffs which begin next fall have contributed to realignment.

Especially, the state grid playoffs. "That's the thing that really surprised me," Samuelson said. "This is big with so many schools that want two playoff spots per conference."

From Waukegan in the north to Proviso East in the south, the Suburban League stretches across suburbia so much so that traveling times have become absurd.

"You can't make it anymore," Samuelson said. "If you go for an evening meet, you get held up in traffic. If you're going for an afternoon contest, you're held up coming back. Now with girls' athletics, the problem is doubled."

Evanston high schools Supt. Scott Thomson will be present at Tuesday's meeting and insists, "It's better to build for the future than hang onto something whose time has passed. We're looking ahead to new rivalries and a more modern league, one based on modern conditions."

"This new proposal reflects the geographical and population realities of suburban Chicago," he said. "The sooner we readjust in line with what's happened the last 10 years, the better off we'll all be. Let the past be the past."

Hersey whips Palatine

Palatine tried in vain to keep that tie and take the lead but there was Mr. Corzine, standing in the way of all that. He scored on three straight jumpers, blocked a Pirate shot and Hersey went out from 50-44. Besides his seven third-period baskets, Corzine found time to assist on the other two the Huskies made.

But Palatine stayed close enough and trailed 56-50 when a probable turning point came in the game. With the Pirates on offense, Mara, 6-3, had the ball in the low post against Mr. Big. He wasn't intimidated and managed to get off a high-arched jump shot that headed into the basket. But the ball seemed to be intimidated by Corzine and promptly rolled off the rim. Hersey went down to score, Corzine added another basket later and the Huskies led 60-50 with 3:52 left in the game.

With 56 seconds left, Hersey had a seemingly safe 70-41 lead, but Palatine's Jim Arden came up with a jump shot, then Cole hit and it was 70-45. But that was it as Corzine led the game with 15 seconds left on two free throws.

Corzine was the only Hersey player in double figures. Tim Conrad and Rich Madison each tallied eight for the winners. Arden led Palatine with 20, followed by Mara's 18 and Cole's 10.

Palatine drops to 3-7 in the MSL North. Finrock wasn't displeased with his team's performance. It had a tough game against Wheeling (losing only 64-58) early in the week. And in the Pirates' first match with Hersey, Corzine & Co. blew Palatine off the court 74-48.

But it still was a big win for the Huskies. In many ways.

Bison land No. 1—first league basketball victory

by DWIGHT B. ESAU

In Buffalo Grove, Grady's bunch is more popular than Brady's Bunch of TV fame.

Sorry, Florence Henderson, but you and your band of kids couldn't hold a candle these days to a fighting, determined, never-quit bunch of Bison basketball players.

Paul Grady's marvelous crew opened the Buffalo Grove cage hall of fame Friday night with a heart-stopping 50-44 triumph over Schaumburg. But this just wasn't another basketball win. This pulsating, tense game was notable because:

It was the Bisons' first Mid-Suburban League win ever.

Brian Allsmiller's 22 points set a new team and school individual scoring record. Okay, fans, so it's only the first year for this brand new school. They had fun setting records Friday, so why deny them? They've had little else to cheer about this kickoff season.

The game proved that the Bison "bunch" of freshmen and sophomores can, when they want to bad enough, hang in there, come from behind, and win, even when all seems lost.

"I could tell the boys wanted this one badly all week," said an ecstatic Paul Grady afterward. "I could feel this coming. In fact, I even thought we had a good chance of winning bigger than we did."

"We did it with defense," he said. "Especially in the second half, the boys started to play a zone way it's supposed to be played. We shut off their penetration, got some turnovers, and got key points when we needed them."

"Our offense failed us in the clutch, we didn't get the points in the last few minutes when we needed them," said Saxon Coach Joe Breault, whose team led most of the way and almost won with two substitutes in the fourth quarter.

"When we lost John McIlraith on fouls with about four minutes left, that was the key," said Breault. "He was playing a good game, especially inside, and was doing our best rebounding."

This game, (no, it was really a happening) was a nail-biter from the opening tip. The score was tied more than a dozen times, and the biggest lead was five points, enjoyed by the Bisons early in the second half.

Three players fouled out of the rough, often sloppy contest, and two technicals were called, one on each team, as players reacted a bit too hotly to foul calls.

But this memorable win, Bison fans,

Brian Allsmiller

was fashioned in the last half of the final quarter. Here's what happened:

Saxon Dave Hill converted two free throws for a 40-37 Schaumburg lead with 4:50 left. The Bisons, playing carefully, almost too carefully, had scored only nine points in the second half and were frequently throwing away passes when they tried to get the ball to their "hot hand," Allsmiller.

But then Dave Smithern lofted an arching pass to Brian, who tipped it in. Smithern followed with a free throw seconds later and the score was tied.

Hill fouled out then, but Gary Merchant hit a layup. He missed a chance for a three-point play. Dave Gallagher then hit two key free throws with three minutes left to make 44-40 Saxons and the Bisons seemed done. The Saxons didn't know it yet, but their scoring for the night was over.

Allsmiller got free for a shot jump and Barry Schuster, fouled in a scramble, sank two charity tosses and it was tied again with two minutes left. Barry Schuster then fouled Merchant after a bad Bison pass, but Gary missed the free throw. Tim Stonerook rebounded and Allsmiller hit again to put the Bisons up 46-44 with 1:10 left.

The Saxons held the ball too long at their end, and a bad shot was grabbed by Stonerook, who was fouled by Merchant. Tim calmly swished the two free throws with 30 seconds left as the stands exploded each time. Allsmiller frosted the victory cake with his final jumper at the buzzer.

So when that hall of fame is opened, special places should be reserved for Allsmiller and Stonerook, perhaps the two brightest stars in the Bisons' beautiful future.

Tim and Brian grabbed nearly a dozen rebounds each as they used their height advantage well on most occasions.

Smithern scored nine points and played a fine floor game.

"I was really proud of our bench tonight," said Grady. "Brian and Barry Schuster both did very well, and Jim McGowan executed his assignment on the zone very well, helping us force played possibly his finest game, scoring them to the outside."

For the frustrated Saxons, McIlraith 12 points and grabbing more than a half-dozen rebounds. Merchant finished with 10.

"This game showed me what can be achieved with a proper attitude," said Grady. "It was great seeing these kids go out and get something which they wanted so badly."

The Bisons had lost 12 straight since beating Adlai Stevenson way last early December. This was their third win of this first season. The Saxons, whose only conference win was 67-52 over these same Bisons in December, fell to 1-9 in the Mid-Suburban South and 5-13 overall.

But the Bisons didn't have Allsmiller in the lineup in that first loss. He could have had many more points Friday if he had overcome his over-anxiousness near the basket.

Perhaps the best thing about this night is the youth, and future, of both these teams. All our futures should look like that.

Falcon hits 15-footer in closing second

Meyer's basket topples Elk Grove

by BOB RICHARDS

Forest View's Mike Meyer may never have a moment like the one he experienced Friday night again. The 6-1 senior took a pass to the right of the key turned around and hit a 15-foot jump shot with one second against Elk Grove left to win the game for Forest View, 55-53.

Meyer's winning shot was followed by an Elk Grove timeout and then a desperation length-of-the-court inbounds play to Grenadier star Ken Pollitz which went for naught.

During that last timeout, Meyer sat on the Falcon bench in a daze. "I just couldn't believe it," Meyer said, adding he had never made a shot to win a game until then.

For the Falcons, it was a come-from-behind win. Trailing by nine points midway through the third quarter, they cut the Elk Grove lead to 43-36 at the end of that stanza.

Then someone turned on the freezer on Elk Grove's end of the court. The Falcons, applying a tenacious full-court press, scored five unanswered buckets, two by senior Craig Brinkman, two by junior Mark Russo and one by senior Don Stevens plus a pair of free throws by Russo, to take a 48-43 lead with 4:14 remaining in the contest.

The Grenadiers, unable to find the hoop, took a timeout and were shaken out of their stupor by Parmentier. It was nip and tuck the rest of the way and with each basket, the roar grew louder. The action was intense as each team pressed on defense and ran on offense. Greg Kelley hit two free throws with 4:10 left to cut the Falcon lead to 49-45.

Then, Pollitz Mid-Suburban League scoring leader started to take charge, scoring from close in to make it 48-47.

Brinkman came back with a layup to give the Falcons their three-point cushion with 3:09 remaining, but Elk Grove's Bill Prince pumped in a two-pointer and it was 50-49.

Meyer hit a 10-footer as a warmup for his game-winning tally and the Falcons jumped out 52-49 with 2:10 remaining only to have the lead cut again by Pollitz on a high archer.

Russo hit a charity toss for Forest View and Pollitz hit a pair for Elk Grove with 22 seconds to go and it was a brand new ball game, 53-53.

Then it was Mike Meyer night. The lanky guard was the fourth Falcon to handle the ball on a set play which began with eight seconds to go. He dribbled once, turned around and let it fly for the winner.

The game was played evenly from start to finish with Forest View starting slow with only three field goals in the first quarter, and Elk Grove finishing slow with just three baskets in the final period.

Elk Grove had an 11-6 lead at the quarter, but had it cut to 25-24 at the half. They pulled ahead to 43-36 after three periods, but couldn't hold it as the Falcons pecked away and won the game.

The Falcons had a balanced scoring attack with three players scoring in double figures and two others scoring nine points each. Pollitz led all scorers with his 24 points for the Grenadiers, exactly his seasonal average. Steve Carson pumped in 14 for Elk Grove in a losing cause.

"We knew it would be a tough one for us," said Forest View coach Ted Wissen. "It was a big win. These two schools are in quite a rivalry."

Bill Parmentier, Elk Grove's coach said his team's inability to handle the ball well cost them the win. "We didn't handle the press very well. There was no reason for it, we have faced presses all year," he said.

"We've played four games in eight days now and I think we just got a little tired," Parmentier said.

Wissen attributed his team's comeback to team play on all areas of the court.

"We just came out and we helped out whenever we could," he said.

Toward the end, both teams relieved on pure hustle. And that's what made the difference as the teams were virtually even in rebounding, turnovers and field goal shooting percentage with Forest View holding a slight edge in all three departments.

The Falcons held a 35-34 edge on the boards and had 14 turnovers compared to Elk Grove's 17. The Falcons hit 41 percent of their shots while the Grenadiers hit at a 39 percent clip.

The Falcons came out in a man-to-man defense and tried to keep Elk Grove's Pollitz outside whenever possible. Late in the game, the Grenadier star was being triple teamed, but he was still winding around the defenders to score.

"He's a super player," Wissen said. "He's a star. They're the most improved team in the league."

The Falcons moved their Mid Suburban League south Division mark to 7-3, two games behind Conant (9-1) which lost in overtime Friday to Prospect. The Falcons are 14-5 on the year.

Elk Grove is still finding wins hard to come by in conference play. They are now 4-6 in the South Division race in fourth place, yet they are still 12-9 for the year.

Harper looks sharp; tops McHenry for 5th loop win

by DON FRISKE

Playing possibly one of their best overall games of the season, the Harper basketball team evened their conference record by defeating McHenry last Saturday afternoon, 89-76.

The Hawks, who led most of the game, gained the lead by combining a strong offensive and defensive effort in the first half.

"We shot well in the opening half," said Roger Bechtold, Hawk coach. "We were also in a zone defense, which forced McHenry to take outside shots."

As a result of this, McHenry only made 12 of 39 shots in the first half. The Hawks had only one more first-half shot, but managed 22 of their 40 attempts.

At the half the Hawks had the lead 46-27, and at one point in the early part of the second half they owned a 30-point lead.

But then McHenry started to come back, the closest they could get, however, being 11 points.

"Our defense let down somewhat in the second half," explained Bechtold,

"but our offense was still working for us."

The Hawks have now won two straight Skyway Conference games to even their conference mark at 5-5. Their overall record is 11-12.

Eight players finished in double figures, four from each squad. Mike Millner for the Hawks led all scorers with 22 points.

He was followed on the Hawks by Steve Heldt (18), Steve Schmidt (16), and Chuck Neary (15).

Joe Dehn led McHenry scorers with 20 points, followed by Dale Grochinsky (16), Wes Wittmus (14), and Randy Blazier (12).

"Heldt and Millner have been playing real well for us," said Bechtold. "Neary completely dominated the first half with four blocked shots."

The Hawks out-rebounded McHenry 60-32, with 20 of those coming off of the offensive board. Millner also led Hawk rebounders with 18, and Neary had 13.

"We ran well and our fast break worked well for us. It was one of our best overall games of the year," said Bechtold.

Tomorrow night the Hawks travel to Elgin to try to even their overall record and also to go ahead of the league. Even though the Hawks have previously beaten Elgin, their coach doesn't see it as a breather.

"It won't be an easy game because the last one was a hard fought battle," said Bechtold. "If we can keep playing the way we have been, we should be in good shape."

Lions drop pair but give Dons interesting argument

by ART MUGALIAN

Once again, the St. Viator basketball players took the long, sad walk down the dimly lit stairway toward their locker room.

Again, they sat with heads hung low. And again, coach Steve Antrim shook his head and said, "I thought we were going to win it."

The Lions played three quarters of good basketball Friday night before finally losing to Notre Dame, 59-51, in Arlington Heights.

Indeed, defeat is getting to be a regular thing for St. Viator this season. Antrim's boys took it on the chin Saturday, too, 58-54, at St. Joseph. Even though the Lions have now lost 18 straight without a win, each setback is as disappointing to the players as the first. Each defeat represents plans gone awry, hopes dashed, hard work unrewarded.

But the spunky Viator coach views the long season as more than a measure of wins and losses. "I was pretty proud of them tonight," Antrim said, after his Lions fell to the Dons Friday. "We're coming on now. It took us this long to learn how to play."

Friday's first period alone was an indication that St. Viator has come a long way this year. The first time the Lions faced the Dons, they trailed 27-0 after eight minutes. This time, Antrim's team took an 18-17 lead to the sidelines.

Sparkling his club's efforts was Lion Glen Girard, who was everywhere, grabbing rebounds and playing the kind of defense his coach expects. The 6-foot-7 center potted in six first-quarter points, but he finished the night with only 11.

"Our big guy is coming around," Antrim said with enthusiasm, as he continued his praise of the Lions.

The coach also had good things to say about his two leading scorers Friday, Bill Foreman and Terry Keenan, who each contributed 12 points.

"Keenan sacrificed a little out there," Antrim pointed out. "Sometimes that's not easy to do. He passed the ball for us — he gave Girard a couple of his baskets."

A rugged Notre Dame defense and some hot shooting by Dons' Mike English and Rick Ferina turned the game around in the second quarter, and ND led at the half, 28-23.

But the Lions didn't give up. In the third period, Girard hooked a bucket from six feet, Paul Kastner took a rebound and rushed the length of the court for a layup, and Keenan popped a 10-footer. At the 2:27 mark, Keenan drove in for a layup, and Viator had a 41-38 edge.

But with five minutes to play in the game, and the Lions up by one point, English swished an eight-foot jumper. Scott Franz followed with another jump shot for ND, and after a bad Viator pass, Jim Anton was open for an easy two-pointer to give the Dons a 51-46 lead.

"Toward the end, we gave them a lot of second shots," Antrim complained. "We'd stop them on their first shot, but they'd rebound it."

Leading the Dons in rebounding were English and Franz, who also finished one-two in scoring for Notre Dame. English had 21 points and Franz 12.

Antrim was not elated with the eight-point loss, but he managed a few smiles after the game.

"I keep saying this — and it's hard to believe," the coach said, "but we are getting better. If we play like this, we'll do well in the tournaments."

But in the Saturday night game, the Lions never led. Mike Copeland scored 32 points in taking St. Joseph to an easy 14-point victory as the Chargers hit 59 per cent of their shots. Keenan netted 22 for the Lions, Steve Hansen scored 12, and Girard had 10.

"We're getting better," Antrim repeated, "but we keep running into real good teams."

LOOKING FOR DAYLIGHT is Arlington's Jeff Cleveland as Wheeling's Bill Kenney and Bob Westrich (25) converge during action Friday night. Cleveland had 10 points and six assists as Arlington won 72-60.

Prospect that fell short.

Dave Sutherland immediately put Conant into the overtime lead, 48-46 with a 15-foot baseline jumper, but Black, who had missed two potential tying shots from the floor, finally found the range on an off-balanced, one-hander from the free-throw line to knot the score at 48 with 50 seconds remaining.

"We were trying to isolate him (Black) behind a double screen," Slayton said. "But Conant went to a man-to-man and they were on him pretty tight."

Conant couldn't drop a shot on its ensuing trip down the floor and Prospect ate up most of the final seven seconds jockeying for the winner.

Again Black got the call, but he was swamped by the rangy Cougars and had to settle for another desperation attempt from the top of the circle.

The crowd hushed in anticipation of a second overtime as Black's shot bounced off the rim at the buzzer, but an official came tooling out of the pack of tired players and pointed a guilty finger at Cougar Gary Oslane.

Black, in solitude on the court, dribbled twice and pocketed "the most important shot of my life."

Bedlam followed. Conant maintained a slim lead through the first two and one-half quarters mostly on the inside muscle of burly Roger Sander who constantly bailed his way down the baseline for difficult layups. Sutherland, meanwhile, kept Prospect honest from the outside with his team-leading 17 points.

Cougar Dave Irion, playing at only about 30 per cent according to head coach Dick Redlinger, was noticeably pale with the flu and far from the form he exhibited in beating Prospect 53-48 with 22 points in the two teams' first meeting.

Redlinger says that Irion must be 100 per cent tomorrow night (Tuesday) if Conant wants to clinch the South Division title against contending Forest View.

Prospect, having been eliminated from the MSL race, can level its sights at the post-season tournament play. The Knights have been in the red enough this season (5-11 overall).

But after the superb performances from their four juniors and one senior, maybe the Knights are ready to stay in the Black.

Fremd holds on to topple Meadows, 52-51

by DON FRISKE

If anyone had walked into the Fremd-Rolling Meadows game during the fourth quarter last Friday night, they would have had trouble believing the situation.

First, they wouldn't believe the way the two teams were battling it out, like two men walking the plank, fighting over who would go first.

Then they wouldn't believe that one team was trying to stay out of the North Division's bottom spot while the other was scrapping to get out.

The final score couldn't have been any closer, as the Vikings won the game, 52-51, to keep the Mustangs in last place.

Early in the game, both teams exchanged baskets evenly and at 4:11 in the first quarter the score was tied, 8-8.

Pulling away in the second period, the Vikings owned a 22-13 lead with 4:12 left in the first half.

The Mustangs then got within six points of their hosts, 26-20 with only 53 seconds on the clock.

In the remaining 41 seconds, the Vikings put through six straight baskets to own the biggest lead of the game at the half, 32-30.

"We got a few breaks there late in the second quarter, and capitalized on a couple of steals," said Leon Kusuboske, Viking coach. "We were always there applying the pressure."

Kasuboske also gave credit to the Vikings' defensive play in the first half, holding the Mustangs to 10 points in each of the first two periods.

The Mustangs came out of the locker room like a totally different team in the second half. They quickly outscored the Vikings, 12-4, in the first five minutes of the third quarter to pull within four points of the Vikings, 36-32.

Two things accounted for the Mustangs' vast improvement. They were working the ball into their front line while also limiting Fremd's shots by controlling the boards.

"We showed we can do well when we get something out of our front line," said Ken Arneson, Mustang coach. "We controlled the boards and we fought back."

Kasuboske, who gave praise to his defense in the first half, felt differently about the second half.

"We sort of fell off in that third quarter," said the Viking coach.

The Mustangs kept right on coming in the final quarter with eight straight points to take the lead for the first time in the game. Ken Hatfield's driving underhand lay-up at 5:46 gave the Mustangs the lead and then his shot from the free throw line gave the guests a four-point lead with 5:14 left in the game, 43-39.

Then something happened to both teams to set up the last minute nail-biting. The Mustangs, the league's second best free throw shooting team, couldn't hit any, and Fremd changed defenses.

"For being the one of the best free throw shooting teams we didn't do so well," said a disappointed, but happy, Arneson.

The Mustangs shot one-for-eight from the line and missed on four one-on-one attempts late in the game.

"When they took the lead we switched to a man-to-man defense and that won the game for us," explained Kasuboske.

The Vikings shot off the Mustangs for four minutes in the final quarter after the Mustangs had taken the lead.

"That was a tough game because Fremd's a physical team," said Arneson. "We haven't had the pressure for a long time and that might account for the poor free throw shooting, but I'm just happy we came back."

The Mustangs out-rebounded the Vikings, 36-35, with Dave Thorstensen leading the Mustangs with 10. Randy Weber had 13 for the Vikings.

Weber also led all scorers with 17 points. Tom Holl had 11 for the Mustangs and Bob Frank had 10 for the Vikings, the only other two to score in double figures.

Viking Jeff Hanisch had 11 assists and Mustang Pat Geegan finished the game with nine.

Next Friday the Vikings travel to Hershey while the Mustangs play at Wheeling.

Village to weigh Hank Farm annex at meet tonight

by JOE FRANZ

Annexation of the 86-acre Hank Farm development in unincorporated Lake County, which was rejected unanimously by the plan commission, will be considered tonight by the village board.

The plan commission two weeks ago voted 5-0 to recommend the village board reject the project. Centex Homes Corp. has asked to build 940 townhouses and condominiums on the site. The Hank Farm is located north of the Chevy Chase County Club.

Along with the Hank Farm, the plan commission also turned down a request for annexation and multi-family zoning for a 12-acre tract to the west and a five-acre commercial area fronting on Milwaukee Avenue.

The plan commission turned down the project primarily because it does not meet the village's planned unit development ordinance in regard to rear and side yard set-back requirements.

THE COMMISSION also opposed annexation because the water and sewer facilities in the development will be provided by Lake County instead of the village.

Having the project serviced by a different system from the rest of the village will create problems, the commission said.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson, however, has said if the village annexes the property, it must by law supply it with water because of provisions in its water bond ordinance. The sewer facilities would be provided by the county, as is the case with Lake County homes that are now in the village.

According to Lake County Public Works Director Robert Deegan, the county already has installed water lines across the property and should supply the water. Deegan opposes annexation of the property to Buffalo Grove.

LARSON SAID he favors annexation because the village is better equipped than Lake County to provide water and other services to the development. Since the project has already been approved under Lake County zoning it can be built even if the village board turns down the annexation request, he said.

If the project is built under county zoning, Larson said it could turn out to be a liability because the village may still be called on to perform some services. By annexing it, the village will at least have some say over the development plan, he added.

The owner of the Hank Farm, prior to giving Centex an option to buy, agreed to donate $39,000 to Aptakisic-Tripp School Dist. 102. Centex, however, refuses to pay an additional $71,000 to $76,000, estimated to be the amount required for schools under a village resolution.

Park Director Stan Crosland said Friday the same resolution requires 13 to 17 acres for "active recreation." Although Centex' park donations have not been determined yet, he said, the firm appears to be several acres short of the requirement.

In addition to the park and school donations, Centex refuses to pay a $100-a-unit-annexation fee, thus the village would lose $94,000 in revenue.

ALTHOUGH NOT required by law, the village has received the fees from almost all recent developers. Centex officials have said the fees are "outside the realm of reasonableness." They have said if the village insists on the fees or other donations, Centex will build the project under county zoning.

Evening hours set for vehicle tag sales

The Buffalo Grove Municipal Building will be open the next two Thursday evenings to accommodate residents wishing to purchase village vehicle stickers.

The deadline for displaying the stickers on vehicle windshields is midnight Feb. 15. Stickers can be obtained by mail or at the municipal building, 50 Raupp Blvd.

The building will be open Feb. 7 and Feb. 14 from 7 to 9 p.m. Residents can purchase the stickers then or during regular business hours, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. to noon Saturdays.

Motorists who fail to display stickers by the deadline will be fined $15 and required to purchase a sticker. Stickers are $10 each.

Anti-abortion group presentation tonight

The Illinois Citizen's Concern for Life Group will make a presentation on abortion at St. Mary's School in Buffalo Grove tonight at 8 p.m.

Lynn Sprobe and Diane Kelly will be the featured speakers. The presentation will include slides, a film and a talk on the "positive alternatives" to abortion. A question-and-answer period will follow.

The program is sponsored by St. Mary's Adult Education Committee. The program will be in the school hall, 75 N. Buffalo Grove Rd.

NORMAN DAVIS, consultant for Franklin Boulevard Hospital, tells a crowd at the Wheeling Park District meeting that the hospital will serve Wheeling and Buffalo Grove. He also said his group is not in contention with anyone for land and if park officials can find the group another site.

Another bid by park officials

Childerley park site effort renewed

by RICH HONACK and JOE FRANZ

The Wheeling Park District will make another effort tonight to convince the village board to designate the Childerley property as a park site on the official village map.

Park officials are hopeful that a joint special meeting between them, village trustees and representatives of Franklin Boulevard Hospital last week will get them a favorable vote. The hospital is also interested in the site at 506 McHenry Rd. for a satellite facility.

Norman Davis, a consultant for the hospital, told the two boards and an audience of about 15 people, however, that his group is in a "confused position." "As far as I'm concerned, we are really not in contention with anybody."

DAVIS SAID HE was unaware of anyone else wanting the Childerley site until a Herald reporter contacted him last week and asked about the situation. Davis then added that the only reason is because it was offered to the hospital by village officials when the hospital was invited to Wheeling.

"We are not bound in any way to any specific plot of land," said Davis. "There is also no guarantee in the world that the Buffalo Grove-Wheeling area is going to get a hospital. We're willing to bring a satellite hospital here."

Davis also said that the main problem now, and a reason for not just giving in to the park district on the land question, is time. He said that it is imperative that the hospital obtain land for the facility in order to get an application on file with the state by April, when the hospital governing board meets.

He later explained that this date is important because of a pending "certificate of need" law, which is now going through legislative channels. The law has already been passed by the state house of representatives and is now in the state senate.

This law would force a hospital to show a specific need for a hospital in a given area. "As far as I'm concerned, this is a 'hangarout court,' and would probably show there isn't a need for another hospital in the entire state," Davis said.

Therefore, he added, the hospital must have a site and if park officials or anyone else could recommend an alternate site, hospital officials would be happy to abandon the Childerley site to the park district.

DAVIS THEN WAS presented with maps from the district's real estate consultant, Charles DeBruiler and village trustee William Hein, that showed several areas of vacant land that may be used for the hospital. The areas shown by DeBruiler are sites definitely available.

Hospital a 2-town project: officials

Franklin Boulevard Hospital officials "definitely" consider their proposed satellite facility a Buffalo Grove and Wheeling venture, despite never consulting Buffalo Grove village officials or surveying its residents.

Those were the feelings of Norman Davis, a consultant for the hospital. He said of a special meeting in Wheeling last week that the hospital officials consider Buffalo Grove and Wheeling "like the twin cities."

When asked why the people of Buffalo Grove were never surveyed, Davis said the survey of Wheeling residents' needs was sufficient enough.

"When you have two villages so much alike there is no need to survey both of them. Besides that the survey that was conducted was done by the Village of Wheeling."

DAVIS ADDED that all considerations and projections being made by the hospital, however, involve both Wheeling and Buffalo Grove.

"When we look at the population of the area, for instance, we look at both villages and then determine our needs," he said.

Hospital officials also said that Buffalo Grove was a primary reason for wanting a site in the northwest portion of Wheeling. They said this way the accessibility from Buffalo Grove and other Lake County communities would be easy.

Officials said, however, that at no time have they considered moving the hospital site to Buffalo Grove, since it was Wheeling officials who approached Franklin Boulevard.

Currently, a majority of hospital cases in Buffalo Grove are handled by Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights and Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines.

Charged in Wheeling extortion probe

Two indicted county officials leave posts

by BOB CASEY and AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Two officials indicted last week on extortion charges in connection with a Wheeling zoning case have left their posts with the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals.

Ira Colitz, 58, of 1000 N. Lake Shore Dr., Chicago, resigned his membership on the zoning board and Nicholas Phillips, 39, of 410 W. Marion St., Prospect Heights, was suspended from his $16,680-a-year planner job with the board by County Board President George Dunne.

They were among six men, including James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and two current Wheeling village officials accused by a federal grand jury of extorting a total of $300,000 from developers and builders in return for zoning and other favors.

The two village officials, William Bieber, $21,590-a-year director of building and zoning, and Michael Valenza, former trustee and head of the environmental commission, declined to discuss whether they will resign.

"I have no comment," said Bieber, who was named in four of the six indictments and in a total of 15 counts returned Thursday morning by a special federal grand jury that has been investigating alleged shakedowns in the village for almost a year.

Valenza, a trustee from 1969 to 1973, said that "under advice of my counsel, I'm not to discuss this with anyone." He is now part owner of a hot dog stand, Do-Dog's Dogs, 636 N. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling.

Valenza, 236 E. Jeffrey Ln., Wheeling, is charged with one count of extortion and one count of conspiracy to commit extortion in connection with a delivery of furniture valued at $1,700 or more he allegedly received as part of a shakedown of Wickes, Inc.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said Friday he had not talked with Bieber or Valenza about the federal charges. Scanlon said the village board may meet tonight in closed session to discuss the indictments.

He said he does not believe Bieber and Valenza should be referred to as village officials. Bieber is an employee of the village, and Valenza is a non-salaried appointee as head of the environmental commission, Scanlon said.

Valenza's commission was recently given power to review zoning and planning decisions on proposed developments.

Dunne said Friday the county may (Continued on page 9)

by JILL BETTNER

The Wheeling housewife breathed a sigh of resignation and said, "All I can say is it's about time. I'm not surprised at all, we all knew something was going on."

She had been asked to comment on a six-month federal investigation, that last week resulted in the indictments of six persons on charges of extortion and conspiracy in connection with alleged shakedowns of developers.

Reactions to the arrests by village residents were low-key, in sharp contrast to expressions of "shock" and "surprise" by village officials.

William Bieber, director of building and zoning; Michael Valenza, head of the environmental commission and a former village trustee; and William Hart, former village trustee, were among those indicted by a federal grand jury.

Others named in the indictments were James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, who has played a backstage role in Wheeling politics for more than a decade; Nicholas Phillips, a cousin of Stavros and employee of the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals; and Ira Colitz, a member of the county zoning board and former Democratic state representative from Chicago's 12th District.

THE SIX ARE accused of accepting a total of $300,000 from several developers and from Wickes Inc. in return for village zoning approval, permits and other favors between 1968 and 1973.

"I've heard about Stavros," said housewife Suzanne Kurt, 697 S. Merle Ln. "If he is involved in anything dishonest, I'm glad to have it come to the fore."

Mrs. Kurt said rumors of wrongdoing by village officials and others have been widespread in the community. Like other residents, she said indictments in Wheeling weren't unexpected after the recent arrests in Hoffman Estates and the shady deals uncovered in other suburbs by U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office.

"It seems like you get a little bit of this all over," she said. "I think people have just kind of become immune to it — they're not surprised by anything. I hope it won't create too much of an attitude of complete distrust. There are good guys and bad guys, but sometimes it's difficult to tell the difference."

"I think it's terrible about the arrests here, but with so much crooked stuff going on in the world, I'd expect anything," said Charles Krueger, proving Mrs. Kurt's point.

EDWARD Mahoney, 1456 Sandpettle Dr., raised the question of the possible effect that allowing builders to bend or break village building codes could have on the village in years to come.

"Nobody likes public officials stealing from the people and everything," Mahoney commented. "With all those condominiums they're jamming down our throats, we're going to have some terrible flooding problems in the future."

From the library

The Wheeling Public Library District's free winter film series continues on Friday, Feb. 15, at 8:30 p.m. with "Anatomy of a Murder" starring Jimmy Stewart and Lee Remick. Free crafts demonstrations take place every Tuesday morning. Call the library for a schedule.

Clive Egleton's "Bormann Brief" chronicles an event that could have transformed the final days of World War II. It envisions what might have happened if Martin Bormann had been assassinated.

Some of the most famous trials of the past 10 years have been affected by post-mortem evidence uncovered by Dr. David Spain. In "Post-Mortem," Dr. Spain shows how the dead can be made to tell their tales by the unscrupulous use of autopsy as a truth-seeking tool and how autopsies can be used as political and legal weapons.

Margaret Steinfeld's "Who's Minding the Children?" recounts the history, describes the current situation and presents the crucial political and educational questions whose resolutions will determine the future of day care in America.

"MAY I KEEP This Clam, Mother? It Followed Me Home" by Ronald Rood is a guide to the care and feeding of wild pets from skunks to spiders, from crabs to catfish.

If you have ever wanted to sew a patch-work quilt, carve a whimsy diddle or a whirlingig from wood, paint a picture on velvet, braid a corn-shuck mat, make your own candles, or put together a Christmas wreath, Florence H. Pettit's "How to Make Whirligigs and Whimsy Diddles and Other American Folkcraft Objects" is for you.

"A Circle of Children" is the story of Marcy MacCracken's involvement with children in a school for the emotionally disturbed, first as a visitor, then volunteer and finally as a teacher.

"It Gave Everybody Something to Do" is a true horror story chronicling the 10 years which Louise Thoresen spent with her husband William, until she shot him in June, 1970.

Bruce Catton's latest book, "Gettysburg: The Final Fury," is an hour-by-hour history of the Battle of Gettysburg. It includes a discussion of the causes and effects of this history-changing event.

"THE WONDERFUL World of Houseboating" by Duane Newcomb is a practical guide to a successful houseboat vacation. It covers where and how to rent, where to go, maps, cruising, safety, family entertainment, outfitting and accessories, and other relevant topics.

To reinforce his theory that transatlantic exploration took place long before the 15th Century, Cyrus H. Cordon cites cryptograms which he feels he has deciphered from ancient texts in "Riddle in History."

Stavros was released after payment of $1,350 in bond following indictment on charges of extortion and conspiracy. 'Park site' again will be urged

With an expression of hope that the hospital can find another tract on which to build, the official meeting ended with five village trustees, hospital representatives, DeBruiler and a few park board members going into another room to discuss the sites.

When approached by The Herald, Village Pres. Ted Scanlon said the officials did not want to discuss the sites in public for fear that newspaper articles about the locations would raise the price of land in those areas.

Scanlon also said one of the most important things concerning the hospital is to "keep it in Wheeling."

When asked about the park designation vote tonight, Scanlon and several of the trustees said they will view it with an open mind. They said the 3-3 vote by the plan commission will not be considered as a recommendation or negative vote, as plan commissioners noted at the end of their discussion on the matter several weeks ago.

The trustees also said that they would like to see both the park district and the hospital satisfied in this case. Several added, however, that if it came down to picking between one or the other, it would be a tough decision.

Tonight's board meeting is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. at the village hall, 235 W. Dundee Rd.

Impeach Nixon Committee to meet with Rep. Crane

Impeach Nixon Committee members will meet with U. S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, to make him aware of the impeachment sentiment in his district.

The meeting was agreed to by Crane on Friday after 12 committee and Independent Voters of Illinois members confronted him at a flagpole dedication at Samuel Kirk Developmental Training Center in Palatine. No date has been set for the meeting, but Crane indicated he might not be available until early March.

They sought out Crane to ask for the conference after four weeks of trying to set up a meeting through his staff proved futile, said Anne Holiday, an Impeach Nixon Committee coordinator.

The committee will present Crane with petitions signed by residents of his district calling for Nixon's impeachment at the meeting in an attempt to get the impeachment process under way so the involvement, if any, of President Nixon in recent scandals can be determined.

Crane turned down an invitation from the two groups to represent pro-Nixon forces in a debate on impeachment planned for Feb. 24.

"My position is absolutely neutral," said Crane, because he will be a member of the grand jury which might impeach Nixon.

Sheriff's police get wheel tax funds

Accumulated county wheel tax revenue totaling $806,116 will be used to furnish the new Cook County Sheriff's Police central headquarters under construction in Maywood.

The money has been kept in an interest-bearing escrow account pending an Illinois Supreme Court decision on the constitutionality of the tax, which was to be levied after Jan. 1, 1972. The court ruled Thursday that the tax is reasonable under the county home-rule powers because most municipalities in the county already levy such a tax.

The Wheel Tax Ordinance revenue act requires income to be spent in the sheriff's department, although after this year the money will be part of the sheriff's budget and the "excess" could be shifted elsewhere in the county budget.

COOK COUNTY Board Pres. George Dunne said the first money will be used in the new sheriff's headquarters in addition to the department's share of the 1974 county budget.

The accumulated account is from residents of unincorporated areas who have purchased the stickers for two years with the understanding the money would be repaid from the escrow account if the tax were ruled unconstitutional.

The first year the tax was collected, 45,900 stickers were issued, bringing that year's account to $675,297. Many motorists chose to ignore the disputed tax in 1973, and the county collected only $130,819 from the sale of 9,500 stickers. So far this year, $545 has been collected.

Motorists who wish to renew their stickers or obtain them for the first time can get applications at county sheriff's stations in the Northwest Suburbs, on Milwaukee Avenue in Niles. The applications are also available at most township offices, according to a spokesman from the county treasurer's office. They can be obtained in person only at the county collector's office, 118 N. Clark St., Room 112, Chicago.

The stickers range from $10 to $15 for cars, depending on size, and up to $95 for trucks. Checks or money orders for the proper amount must be mailed with the applications.

ALTHOUGH THE stickers expire at the end of each calendar year, there is no deadline yet. Most municipalities issuing such stickers have a deadline of Feb. 15, but Bill Schroeder of the county management service office said there may be a question of enough time to meet that deadline. He said it will depend on availability of applications and ability of persons to get them through the mail in time.

Sticker owners did not receive renewal applications in the mail this year because of the cost and the uncertainty the tax would be upheld. Schroeder said renewal forms will likely be mailed out in the future.

Mount Prospect 'bad water' fear ends

It's all right to drink your water if you live in north Mount Prospect and adjoining unincorporated areas.

What began as a fairly routine water shortage caused by a power failure at two wells turned into serious speculation that the water may have been contaminated.

While tests were being made on the water, residents of some 6,000 households in the area were urged to boil their tap water. But by early yesterday the warnings about contaminated water were lifted and residents were told their water is safe to drink.

The episode started when two wells of the Citizens Utilities Co. stopped functioning. Because a third well was out of order, awaiting repairs, water was unavailable to residents between 8 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. Thursday.

The area affected by the water shutdown is bounded by Palatine Road on the north, Kensington-Foundry Road on the south, River Road on the east and Elmhurst Road on the west. The Randhurst shopping center is not part of that water system.

THE BOUNDED area included mainly the New Town section of Mount Prospect and also part of Prospect Heights and unincorporated Wheeling Township.

Although a spokesman for Citizens Utility told The Herald Friday there did not seem to be any chance of contamination of the water then, by Saturday the Mount Prospect Health Dept. was issuing a warning to residents of the affected area. Homeowners were told to boil tap water for at least five minutes, or to add 10 drops of chlorine bleach to each gallon of water, stir and let the water stand for a half hour before using.

Utility company spokesmen said they believed enough residual chlorine was in the system to prevent contamination, but as a precautionary measure, the water was tested and until the tests were completed, the water had to be treated.

Two nabbed here for possession of marijuana

Two men were arrested for possession of marijuana early Saturday morning after being stopped by Arlington Heights police for an apparent traffic violation.

Michael J. Stewart, 28, of 1320 N. 34th St., Melrose Park, and Albert T. Peterson, 28, of 475 Wood Dale Rd., Wood Dale, were arrested and charged with possession of marijuana.

Stewart was also charged with driving under a revoked license and fraudulent use of a driver's license.

After stopping the car, police noticed an odor of marijuana from the interior of the automobile and Stewart's clothing. They found marijuana seeds in the car, and arrested both occupants, according to police.

A search of Stewart and the car revealed a substance that was apparently hashish, a plastic bag of apparent marijuana, possible marijuana buds and a marijuana pipe. Police say that preliminary tests confirmed the two substances to be hashish and marijuana.

Police added that Stewart admitted to driving under a false driver's license at the station and gave his real name. A check of records showed that Stewart's license had been revoked.

Officials seek to avoid tax boost

60% of requests for added personnel cut from budget

by STEVE BROWN

The never-never land of budget requests slammed headlong into financial reality as Des Plaines officials pared more than 60 per cent of the requests for new personnel from the proposed 1974 city budget.

Besides the major cutback in requests for new employees in many city departments, Ald. Robert Hinde (4th), who heads the city council's finance committee, said that all budget requests had been trimmed about 7.5 per cent. The proposed budget is designed to prevent any tax increase for the city.

The city council met as a committee of the whole Thursday to examine the proposed budget. The preliminary summary calls for city spending to reach more than $7 million in 1974. The figure represents about a 7 per cent increase over last year.

Hinde said the budget represented a series of compromises between requests and what the city could afford.

"We didn't attack this like a fox in a henhouse, we used a systematic approach and held many work sessions," Hinde added. He also said many more major increases in the proposed budget could force a hike in real estate taxes.

THE PROPOSED personnel cuts drew quick reaction from Des Plaines Fire Chief Donald Corey and Ald. John Seitz (7th), chairman of the council's fire committee.

"I know the council has a job to do, but I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to report a serious lack of manpower within the department," Corey said. He had requested seven new firefighters and four alarm operators. The alarm operators would allow the reassignment of three firefighters to regular duty. The budget allows for the alarm operators and one firefighter.

Corey noted the new firefighters would be used to man a ladder truck now assigned to Fire Station No. 3.

The fire chief said that increased numbers of calls and taller buildings require the city to have two ladder trucks available.

Right now the city has the ladder truck, but not enough manpower to operate the truck. Last year, Corey said the ladder truck at Fire Station No. 1 responded to more than 400 calls. In 1963, the entire fire department had a total of 400 calls.

"We are not trying to build an empire," Corey said. He also noted that trains can block various parts of the city for lengthy periods of time.

ALD. ALAN ABRAMS (8th) said he was "utterly shocked" to learn that the fire department lacked the manpower to operate the truck at all times.

"I can't think of a greater priority than the fire department," Abrams said, adding that it has been an absolute miracle there has not been an unfortunate tragedy because of the lack of manpower.

Corey estimated that the proposed manpower increases would cost the city about $100,000.

Hinde indicated that the manpower increase for the fire department could force an increase in taxes.

Seitz said he would provide the finance committee with additional information supporting the proposed manpower increases.

WHILE MOST OTHER city departments found no complaints with the proposed budget, Police Chief Arthur Hintz also argued for aldermen to restore the six police officers and a clerk that had been trimmed from the budget.

Hintz said while the city's population has not increased in recent years, the number of police calls has risen sharply. The police chief had requested nine new patrolmen, plus two detectives and a communications clerk. The proposed budget allows for three new patrolmen and the communications clerk.

"I'm not happy with the allotment of personnel, I feel all 11 men requested are justified," he added.

Only the city's forestry department received all four new men which were requested. Hinde noted that the new men would be used in the city's tree trimming and removal program and the city would save money because it would no longer need to hire private contractors to perform the work.

CITY COMPTROLLER Duane Blietz noted that Des Plaines will be able to purchase some new equipment, which had been requested, through the use of federal revenue sharing funds. This method will allow the city to use money from its general corporate account for other purposes. The city expects to receive about $212,000 from the revenue sharing program from July, 1974, until June, 1975.

City workers set for bargaining

While a major portion of the city's 1974 budget has been compiled, Des Plaines officials are girding for the start of salary talks with police, fire and public works employees.

Mayor Herbert Behrel said the closed-door negotiations will begin Wednesday with representatives of the Combined Counties Police Assn., which represents the uniformed Des Plaines police. Negotiations with the Des Plaines Professional Firefighters Assn. will start Feb. 11. Behrel said talks with the Municipal Employees City Coordination Assn. will also be held this month. All three organizations are the recognized bargaining agents for the city's rank and file employees in the three departments.

Behrel said he will call an executive session of the city council to discuss salary guidelines with the aldermen.

The proposed city budget includes funds totaling a 5½ per cent, across-the-board pay increase for the employees. However city officials indicated any pay raise is subject to negotiations.

The Illinois open meeting law allows the city council to meet in executive session to discuss personnel.

Behrel said he would hold the session to give the aldermen an opportunity to express their thoughts on salaries for the city's employees.

"This will give everyone an opportunity to speak their mind on the subject," Behrel added.

A VOCATIONAL COMPUTER system called CVIS gives Oakton Community College students information on jobs, career training and schools.

Computer helps pupils pick career

by KATHERINE BOYCE

"Your wish is my command," says the computer.

And indeed it is. The computer, whose name is CVIS (which stands for Computerized Vocational Information Services), came to Oakton Community College last fall and now spends several hours each day helping students pick a career and telling them what kind of training they will need.

Students operate the CVIS terminal by typing on a keyboard. The student reads the computer's message on a screen and continues to type until his questions are answered.

COMPUTERIZED VOCATIONAL Information Services is programmed to give students several different kinds of information to help them select a career. One category gives students general information on occupations, helps the student assess his academic ability, and tells him what kind of training he needs for the career he has chosen.

"Welcome to CVIS," says the first frame, and proceeds by giving students a list of broad categories of careers. The student selects one of the occupation areas and CVIS tells him the kinds of jobs in that field. When a student selects a job, CVIS gives him a 50-word description of it and tells him a 300-word job description is available in his counselor's office. If he decides he doesn't like the job he can go back and ask for information on another one.

CVIS also asks the student what his grades are, how he ranks in class, and how well he does on standardized tests. CVIS then asks the student to judge his own ability.

COMPUTERIZED VOCATIONAL Information Services flashes on its screen what kind of training the student will need for the job he has selected, where he can get that training, and whether his grades and his ability are high enough to qualify.

If a student with good grades selects a

Correction

A Herald story Friday incorrectly reported that a Des Plaines woman was found guilty of a shoplifting charge stemming from an alleged theft of clothing from a local store.

There was no finding of guilt in the case of Phyllis Fosdale, 911 Clark Ln. The woman pleaded innocent to the charge and was given six months' court supervision.

If a person under supervision is not charged with any other offenses during a specified period, the judge may discharge the case.

Decals sent to steady customers

Service station identifying regulars

Once upon a time, service station operators used to give away glasses, dishes and other sundry items to entice motorists into their stations for gas. Now at least one area operator is giving away something new — decals.

Back in the Pre-E. C. days (that's pre-Energy Crisis) drivers could always count on a flood of freebies with every fillup. But with the present gas shortage Ronald Miller who owns Ron's 66 Service at 800 Elmhurst Rd., Des Plaines, has sent all of his regular customers decals that will entitle them and only them to his gas beginning Feb. 1.

Miller said the new system will not be in effect until he learns what his February gas allocation will be. Right now he expects to be about 20 per cent below last year and if that is what it is the system will go in effect.

"I feel if there is an allotment, it wouldn't be fair not to serve the people who have kept me in business," Miller said. He explained only customers who have brought their cars in for service in the past year have received the decals.

"Right now, we are serving everyone as long as they have a half a tank of gas or less," he said. Miller has set a $3 maximum on all gas purchases.

THE CUSTOMERS who have already received the stickers think the idea is great, Miller said.

"I don't mean to hurt or gyp anybody, I'm just trying to keep my head above water and stay in business," he said.

Miller's station, like others in the area, saw its share of drivers queued up in

Charged in Wheeling extortion probe

Two indicted county officials leave posts

by BOB CASEY
and AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Two officials indicted last week on extortion charges in connection with a Wheeling zoning case have left their posts with the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals.

Ira Colitz, 58, of 1000 N. Lake Shore Dr., Chicago, resigned his membership on the zoning board and Nicholas Phillips, 39, of 410 W. Marion St., Prospect Heights, was suspended from his $16,000-a-year planner job with the board by County Board President George Dunne.

They were among six men, including James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and two current Wheeling village officials accused by a federal grand jury of extorting a total of $300,000 from developers and builders in return for zoning and other favors.

The two village officials, William Bieber, $21,500-a-year director of building and zoning, and Michael Valenza, former trustee and head of the environmental commission, declined to discuss whether they will resign.

"I have no comment," said Bieber, who was named in four of the six indictments and in a total of 15 counts returned Thursday morning by a special federal grand jury that has been investigating alleged shakedowns in the village for almost a year.

VALENZA, A trustee from 1969 to 1973, said that "under advice of my counsel, I'm not to discuss this with anyone." He is now part owner of a hot dog stand, Do-Do's Dogs, 636 N. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling.

Valenza, 236 E. Jeffrey Ln., Wheeling, is charged with one count of extortion and one count of conspiracy to commit extortion in connection with a delivery of furniture valued at $1,700 or more he allegedly received as part of a shakedown of Wickes, Inc.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said Friday he had not talked with Bieber or Valenza about the federal charges. Scanlon said the village board may meet tonight in closed session to discuss the indictments.

He said he does not believe Bieber and Valenza should be referred to as village officials. Bieber is an employee of the village and Valenza is a non-salaried appointee as head of the environmental commission, Scanlon said.

Valenza's commission was recently given power to review zoning and planning decisions on proposed developments.

Dunne said Friday the county may

by JILL BETTNER

The Wheeling housewife breathed a sigh of resignation and said, "All I can say is it's about time. I'm not surprised at all, we all knew something was going on."

She had been asked to comment on a six-month federal investigation, that last week resulted in the indictments of six persons on charges of extortion and conspiracy in connection with alleged shakedowns of developers.

Reactions to the arrests by village residents were low-key, in sharp contrast to expressions of "shock" and "surprise" by village officials.

William Bieber, director of building and zoning; Michael Valenza, head of the environmental commission and a former village trustee; and William Hart, former village trustee, were among those indicted by a federal grand jury.

Others named in the indictments were James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, who has played a backstage role in Wheeling politics for more than a decade; Nicholas Phillips, a cousin of Stavros and employee of the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals; and Ira Colitz, a member of the county zoning board and former Democratic state representative from Chicago's 12th District.

THE SIX ARE accused of accepting a total of $300,000 from several developers and from Wickes Inc. in return for village zoning approval, permits and other favors between 1968 and 1973.

"I've heard about Stavros," said housewife Suzanne Kurt, 697 S. Merle Ln. "If he is involved in anything dishonest, I'm glad to have it come to the fore."

Mrs. Kurt said rumors of wrongdoing by village officials and others have been widespread in the community. Like other residents, she said indictments in Wheeling weren't unexpected after the recent arrests in Hoffman Estates and the shady deals uncovered in other suburbs by U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office.

"It seems like you get a little bit of this all over," she said. "I think people have just kind of become immune to it — they're not surprised by anything. I hope it won't create too much of an attitude of complete distrust. There are good guys and bad guys, but sometimes it's difficult to tell the difference."

"I think it's terrible about the arrests here, but with so much crooked stuff going on in the world, I'd expect anything," said Charles Krueger, proving Mrs. Kurt's point.

EDWARD Mahoney, 1450 Sandpebble Dr., raised the question of the possible effect that allowing builders to bend or break village building codes could have on the village in years to come.

"Nobody likes public officials stealing from the people and everything," Mahoney commented. "With all those condominiums they're jamming down our throats, we're going to have some terrible flooding problems in the future."

Three to challenge Oakton incumbents in April race

Three candidates have decided to challenge two members of the Oakton Community College board of trustees in school elections in April.

Robert Doyle, 10073 Linda Ln., Des Plaines; Don Chubirka, 520 N. Knight Ave., Park Ridge, and Harriet Ritter, 5830 Lincoln Ave., Morton Grove, will run against incumbents Stephen Loska and Griffith MacDonald.

Two seats are open on the Oakton board this year. Both incumbents have said they will seek the endorsement of the Oakton Community College convention, a caucus of delegates from elementary and high school districts in Maine and Niles Townships. Loska is a resident of Des Plaines and MacDonald is from Park Ridge.

Doyle and Chubirka both say they also plan to appear before the convention.

Doyle, 36, is a pharmacist and full-time student at Northeastern Illinois University, where he is majoring in education. He says he plans to teach high school and later become a guidance counselor.

DOYLE ATTENDED Wright Junior College, part of the Chicago City College system. "I was involved in student government and indirectly in school administration on a student level," he said. Doyle said he is still interested in the junior college system in the state.

Chubirka, 49, is employed by Chem-trust Industries, a chemical manufacturer in Franklin Park. A resident of Park Ridge for 11 years, he said he decided to run for the Oakton board because he "just wanted to become involved." Mr. and Mrs. Chubirka have four children.

Mrs. Ritter is a broker in her own real estate agency in Morton Grove. She is also a part time student at Oakton taking courses in political science and social science.

MRS. RITTER said she is a member of the women's Political Caucus, a national bi-partisan organization to encourage women to run for public office. She said she has been an observer of local government for years and is a member of the League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Ritter says she objects to the Oakton convention by-laws which say the convention will endorse only one candidate for each seat on the board. She said she will not appear before the convention unless it changes the rule.

School elections are April 13. Candidates must file a nominating petition between Feb. 27 and March 22.

Service station decals identify 'regulars' long lines for gas last week. Some drivers were getting just a gallon or two to top off their tanks, one of Miller's employees said.

"We usually don't pump much gas here, 2,000 gallons on a Saturday is a good day, but recently we have pumped 1,800 gallons on a week day."

Miller said he checked with the U. S. Internal Revenue Service, the Cook County State's Attorney office and other government agencies to see if the plan was legal before sending out the decals.

"They all told me the setup is OK as long as it's not based on race, creed or color," Miller said. A spokesman for IRS said at this time there are no regulations governing the matter.

AS AT MANY service stations, Miller agreed that his bread-and-butter business comes from repair work, not gasoline sales.

A government spokesman said that a number of calls had been received about similar situations throughout the Chicago area.

"The dealers are giving out decals, bumper stickers or taking license numbers of their regular customers so that when things get tight, they will get first," the spokesman explained.

Hoping to avoid another stampede to their gas pumps, dealers are searching for new ways to distribute their dwindling supplies in the most sensible way.

"I guess all I can do is try the stickers and see what happens," Miller added.

Correction

A Herald story Jan. 29, incorrectly stated that police were led to the arrest of a Mount Prospect man through a tip from his wife.

Police said Friday it was a tip from an undisclosed anonymous source that led to the arrest of Juan Coronado, 28, of 672 Pickwick, who was taken into custody by police in Des Plaines last Sunday.

job that requires extensive academic training, CVIS will tell him "The plan you have chosen seems fine." If a student's ability does not coincide with the choice he has made CVIS will tell him, "Your choice puzzles me somewhat. I've compared it with your responses and they don't seem to match. The best way to clear up this problem would be to see a counselor."

Oakton counselor James Bush is careful to point out that CVIS does not program a student into a job. It simply tells him what is available.

"My goal is the expansion of awareness of options open to him," said Bush. CVIS DOESN'T put the student down, and doesn't tell him he'll never make it, said Bush. Two CVIS terminals are located in the student lounge at Oakton. A student can sit quietly, press the keys and read the response. CVIS doesn't embarrass the student, said Bush. "It gives a little message back to him."

When counselors and computer operators write programmed responses for CVIS, they try to make the computer sound human. The computer "speaks" on the student's level and it doesn't lecture. Instead of a cold one-word response to a question CVIS gives a more lengthy explanation.

CVIS isn't "Big Brother," said Bush. "There are a lot of things in education we can humanize and certainly the coldness of the computer is one of them," he says.

AN EXAMPLE of how CVIS has been humanized appears in the category on financial aids when the computer asks the student's sex. CVIS says, "Despite 'equality of the sexes' or 'women's lib' movement, some scholarships are offered to one sex only, type F or M to indicate if you are female or male."

School caucus to interview two candidates

The Dist. 26 General Caucus will interview two prospective school board candidates tonight at 7:30 in the library of River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect.

Scheduled for screening are Mary Waters, 507 Holly, Mount Prospect, and Frank G. Smith, 903 Quince Ln., Mount Prospect. The interviews will be open to the public and are expected to last between 30 to 40 minutes each.

Mrs. Waters has lived in the district for 14 years and has six sons in grammar school and high school. She is currently a substitute teacher in Dist. 26.

"I have always been concerned with the affairs of the district and now that my children are all in school, I feel I have the time to devote to the school board," Mrs. Waters said.

Mrs. Waters never has sought elective office.

SMITH ALSO IS a candidate for the first time, having lived in the district two years.

Caucus chairman Mary Stenbridge has not yet scheduled interviews with incumbent board members Marsha Lupton and Sylvia Lurie, but she hopes to have them appear before the caucus next Monday. Both board members have said they will run for reelection and seek caucus endorsement.

The caucus, which represents eight civic associations and six PTAs, will conduct interviews each Monday until all candidates are screened. Interviews will be open to the public but questions of the candidates may only be asked by caucus members.

If no other candidates come forward before next Monday, the caucus will probably complete its interview schedule then, according to Mrs. Stenbridge.

Catholic nun dies in car-truck crash

A Catholic nun was killed when the auto she was driving was struck by a semi-trailer truck and pushed into another auto on River Road in Des Plaines.

The nun was identified as Leanne Truszkowski, 55, of 353 River Rd., Des Plaines. She was pronounced dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital Friday morning.

According to reports, her auto was struck shortly before 10 a.m. as she attempted to pull out of a driveway onto River Road.

Her car was hit by an oncoming northbound truck driven by a Summit, Ill. man, James Markusic, 29.

Police said the impact of the broadside crash pushed the auto across a center strip into the southbound lanes where it collided with another auto.

Neither Markusic nor the third motorist, Mitchell Pazdro, 24, of 6325 Sheridan

Rd., Chicago required hospitalization, according to reports.

No traffic tickets were issued by police.

Shoppers encouraged to bring own bags

A major food store chain has announced it will pay shoppers 2 cents for every large size bag they bring with them for their groceries, but Des Plaines Health officials warn residents against using other people's bags.

National Food Stores made the offer in light of a nation-wide bag shortage. Customers are asked to bring any large paper, plastic or net bag to the stores.

A National spokesman said stores will not buy back bags from one customer to be used by another because there is doubt sanitation regulations would permit it.

Local sanitarians said the Health Department would only approve of Nation's new practice if bags were not traded from customer to customer. Cross contamination — particularly involving cockroaches and other insects which hide in bags — is the greatest danger of trading bags.

Boesen's surge lifts Maine South to 92-55 victory over Maine West

by MIKE KLEIN

Analyzing Pete Boesen's basketball emotions is a chore because his facial expression seldom changes from one of deep concentration with a touch of aggravation. Call it defiance.

It's there when he's going good and it's there when he's going bad. At times, he'll scowl.

Friday evening, Boesen mirrored aggravation and disgust as he retreated offcourt at 6:49 of the second period with two points and four fouls.

"That first quarter, I wasn't doing anything," Maine South's 6-foot-7 center said later. "At halftime, I really decided to come out and play ball . . . to help the team."

Over the next 10 minutes, Boesen proved all good basketball starts in the head. He canned eight-of-10 third period shots for 16 points as the Hawks sprinted ahead to a 32-55 Central Suburban win over visiting Maine West.

When Boesen fouled out at 6:21 of the last quarter, after scoring 20 points in fewer minutes played, he went to the bench accompanied by a huge ovation.

"Whenever we play Maine West, it's a tough, physical game," he said. "I had that in the back of my mind and wanted to come out tough on the boards."

"Then they started calling all these fouls. But once you're out there, you don't change that attitude."

Hawks tip Waukegan in non-league action

by MIKE KLEIN

Jerome Whitehead doesn't run like the wind, float like a butterfly or sting like a bee. But across all Chicagoland, you'd be hard pressed to find a better prep basketball center.

At 6-foot-0 going on seven feet, Whitehead and Waukegan's other Bulldogs gave No. 3 state ranked Maine South fits Saturday evening. The Hawks survived, 49-48, when Pete Boesen controlled a defensive rebound to end the game.

The word had been: "Wait until you see this Whitehead play." And rebound and score. And do it all. And he did.

Dominating the defensive boards, Whitehead hit four buckets during each half to finish with 16 points. Teammate Ralph Sims had seven baskets and two free throws as they tied for game scoring honors.

It was a Whitehead defensive rebound at 0:09 after a missed free throw by Maine's Tim Bopp that gave the Bulldogs their last chance at an upset win in foreign territory.

Playing the right side baseline, Whitehead went high and pulled Bopp's shot down uncontested. He shuffled it off to substitute guard Greg O'Bryant, smallest man on the floor.

O'Bryant went one-on-five, failing to pass, and when he reached Maine's free throw line, let loose with a hard shot that came down into Boesen's hands.

Boesen took three long-legged dribbles to the left baseline corner, then threw a fullcourt shot as the buzzer sounded.

It was O'Bryant's second shooting mistake during the final 15 seconds and the Bulldogs second one-point loss in as many nights. Waukegan fell short, 60-59, Friday night against Proviso East in a Suburban League fight for first place.

Twenty-four hours later, all the points had been scored at Maine when Boesen tossed as assist pass and Bob McCarthy hit a lay-up with 1:32 left for the Hawks' 49-48 lead.

Demons dump Maine North for 3rd division victory

by CRAIG ROWELLS

The Norsemen had beaten the Blue Demons.

That is, the sophomores of Maine North had just come from 17 points back to beat Maine East's sophomores, 54-50, in a real crowd pleaser.

The stage was set.

Enter the two varsities — starring the Norseman offensive shuffle and the Demon defense.

The game started with the known fact that the Norsemen had yet to beat a brother school: East, West or South. "We didn't want to be the first," cited Maine East coach Paul McClelland.

And they weren't, as Mark Mahoney scored 20 points during East's 61-45 Central Suburban win on Friday. George Kaufman had 20 points for the losers.

The lead went back and forth early, with the Norsemen keeping close. Fifteen-foot shots by Dennis Smith and Kaufman, after they had shuffled through, gave the Norsemen a 10-9 lead with about two minutes left in the first quarter.

Senior guard Keith Larson kept East close before the Demons applied their eventual winning advantage — the defensive press.

Yes, the press did it. The Norsemen could run their shuffle offense if they could get downcourt, collect themselves and then start shuffling.

This was not the first time that Boesen has incurred early foul problems. He had been whistled four times before intermission in a win at Evanston. That night, Boesen hung around long enough to score 22 points.

"There have been games like that for me," he said, "but not a majority . . . perhaps five or six out of 16."

Although Maine West was blown off during the second half, the Warriors trailed just 36-33 at 1:18 of the second quarter. In fact, they led Maine South, 17-16 after one period.

But closing out the first half, unanswered baskets by John Reilly, Tim Bopp and Mike Chrzan gave the Hawks six more points and a 42-33 lead.

Boesen remembered that South coach Bernie Brady was "a little hesitant" about playing him to start the third period. "I suppose it's now or never," Boesen said. "You play now or not at all."

His incredible streak began at 7:48 of that third quarter with a turn-around lane jumper. Boesen followed with a medium right baseline shot (6:24), a short lane jumper (5:50) and a medium left baseline jumper (5:24).

That sent the Hawks safely ahead, 50-33, before West's Glen Heiden could give the Warriors their first points at 4:28. When Boesen came back with a tip-in at 4:19, he still hadn't missed a shot since halftime.

Waukegan worked the ball upcourt, went into an obvious stall and with 45 seconds remaining, called timeout. The Bulldogs cut 30 additional seconds off the clock before O'Bryant drove the lane and tossed a hard 16-footer.

Surely it wasn't the play Waukegan's Bob Joor had designed because there wasn't a Bulldog anywhere near the boards. When the shot was no good, Pete Schmelzer and John Reilly controlled for Maine.

The Hawks called timeout with 12 seconds to play. When Bopp brought the ball upcourt, he was fouled by O'Bryant. It was a bonus free throw situation. And when Bopp missed, Whitehead got the rebound that set up O'Bryant's second missed shot.

Defense dominated this very physical contest in which the Hawks moved to 16-1 overall and Waukegan declined to 14-6. Neither team had many offensive rebounds.

The largest spread was only three points. Waukegan did it just once, in the second quarter, and Maine South on four occasions, all after intermission.

Waukegan had its margin at 28-25 with 41 seconds until halftime. Two Schmelzer free throws cut it to one point at 0:30. Then it was Boesen, working underneath in a crowd, who put the Hawks ahead, 29-28, with a rightside lay-in at 0:01.

Maine South held a pair of three-point leads not quite midway through the third period. But Waukegan went ahead, 38-37, on baskets by Haywood Campbell and Whitehead.

McCarthy, who had four of his five baskets after the half, hit one with 42 seconds left in the third quarter, giving Maine a 39-38 lead. His steal and lay-up during the final five seconds gave the Hawks a three-point bulge starting the final period.

Boesen led Maine with 14 points. McCarthy had 10, Reilly eight and Denny Kladis seven.

Another Heiden basket, long from the left side like his first effort, chopped the deficit to 15 points at 52-37. Then it happened: Boesen finally missed a shot. But he was right there for the rebound and at 3:35, laid in his sixth basket of the period.

Almost 40 seconds passed before Heiden pounded the basket for a long two-point shot from the left side and South's lead was again down to 15 points, 54-39. During that stretch, Boesen missed his other shot on a block by Doug Myers.

His seventh basket of the quarter came at 2:44 on a beautiful assist pass from senior forward Pete Schmelzer. Boesen finished his awesome points spurt where he began, with a shot in the lane at 2:03.

At that point, nobody else had scored for the Hawks since halftime. Schmelzer would add two free throws and one basket; Bobb and Tom Florentine hit one field goal each as the Hawks nestled comfortably with a 66-43 lead after three periods.

"That first half, I was getting my shots but choking," Boesen said. "The second half, the zone they were playing on us left me open many times."

"What they'll try to do is trap the ball at the guard spot so it can't be thrown deep," he continued. "At least, that's in their half-court press."

Boesen's 20 points were good for game honors and Schmelzer was next with 15, nine in the first half when Boesen wasn't doing anything or watching from the bench. Bopp had 13 points and Florentine 12 for the Hawks.

Bill Makuch's 14 points led the visiting Warriors but he couldn't score after halftime. Heiden and Steve Zuccarini scored 13 points apiece. Myers had 10.

Zuccarini scored seven points during the first quarter as Maine West went ahead, 17-16, after eight minutes. The Warriors trailed, 10-6, before a spurt in which Makuch and Zuccarini each hit two baskets.

Both clubs employed a full or half-court press during the opening minutes and it seemed to cause the shakes as there were 10 turnovers committed, six by South.

Makuch hit two baskets and four free throws in the second period when Heiden got five points and Zuccarini none. That Makuch came open during the first half isn't surprising.

The Hawks positioned their defense with Boesen on Zuccarini and Schmelzer going against Myers. It's Schmelzer who

All-Stater Govedarica? Could be!

by MIKE KLEIN

"Maybe we'll be able to get something for him after all," Glenbrook North head coach Dan Perry said of Ted Govedarica's chances at becoming All-State.

Some time ago, Perry wrote Ron Nikcevic and asked that he watch Govedarica last Saturday night at Morton East. Head coach at LaGrange, Nikcevic helps select the Chicago Daily News All-State team.

Nikcevic accepted the invitation. What he saw was Govedarica sinking 15-of-21 field goal attempts and scoring 36 points. "Ron said Ted's one of the best he's seen this year," Perry added.

Glenbrook North defeated Morton, 95-55, for its 17th win against one loss. Including a 31-point effort against Highland Park, Govedarica shot 66 per cent last week, converting 28-of-42 field goal attempts.

That was just one sidelight of an interesting weekend for Central Suburban teams. Behind 23 points apiece by Bob always gets the tougher defensive assignment.

That left Makuch wide open for five field goals and four-of-five at the line before intermission. "No," was Boesen's one-word answer when asked if the Hawks had thought Makuch could hurt them from the outside.

"All week, we concentrated on just two guys — Myers and Heiden," he said. "Those two are the nucleus of their shooting. Myers is going to the basket much better this year in the two games I've seen him."

South's Brady was forced into many changes during the first half. Indeed, only Schmelzer wasn't replaced. Chrzan came in when Boesen left at 6:49 of the second quarter.

But the most effective of all Brady's moves was putting Florentine, a senior, in the backcourt. Florentine's first bucket was a breakaway drive off a Boesen pass at 0:39 of the opening quarter. Two more baskets plus two free throws gave him eight first half points. That neatly complemented Bopp who had two breakaways, two long shots and one free throw for nine points at guard.

Boesen praised Florentine who has played only briefly this season. "Over the summer, he was a definite starter with great shooting ability. But he's a freelance player," Boesen explained.

"When it comes to running an offense, he hasn't been too sure of himself. Now, he's more used to controlling the pace. We can use that potential."

Victory kept the Hawks unbeaten in the CSL at 8-0, tied with Glenbrook North, and 15-1 overall before Saturday night's game against Waukegan. The Warriors declined to 2-6 and 4-13.

Zybur and Jim Zoros, Niles West notched its first conference win, 69-56, at Deerfield's expense.

Also, Steve Goebel broke Niles North's career scoring record when he popped for 20 points in a 48-47 win over Niles East. He now has 773 points for the Vikings, including 383 this year. Goebel is 37 points short of setting a new single season record at Niles.

In Friday's other conference game, New Trier West was never in trouble but could manage just a 10-point win over Glenbrook South, 61-51. Paul McOsker got 17 points and Al Bartelstein 13 for New Trier. Murphy Hofman hit 10 for the Niles Titans.

Niles West surprised Deerfield partially because the losers were without Tom Skiffington who didn't suit and might not play again this season. Extensive muscle bruises in one leg have hemorrhaged.

Niles led Deerfield, 32-24, at halftime and by three points, 44-41, after three periods. It was a one-point game throughout the third quarter and into the fourth.

With 5:58 remaining, Niles West coach Bill Schnurr pulled starting guard Marty Block and inserted seldom used Steve Barron. Hitting a key lay-up and making a later steal, Barron played so well that Block never returned.

Zoros picked up 11 of his 23 points at the free throw line where he missed only one shot. Down the stretch, Zoros converted nine-of-10 fourth quarter free throws. He was six-of-12 from the field.

Itasca Meadows, village officials settle old feud

by JERRY THOMAS

A long-standing feud between Elk Grove Village officials and residents of the Itasca Meadows subdivision in unincorporated Elk Grove Township had ended.

An overwhelming majority of Itasca Meadows homeowners directed officers of the Homeowners association Saturday to contract with Elk Grove Village for fire and ambulance protection.

Although the homeowners live about six blocks away from the Elk Grove municipal complex all but a few residents contract with the Roselle Fire Protection District six miles away.

Atty. Ed Remus, an Itasca Meadows resident, representing the Association, told its members, "Let past animosity disappear. You were treated unfairly in the past, now forgive and forget. We need to decide now if we want help from someone one minute away or 11," he added.

He urged the members to contract immediately with the village for fire service at the village's $42 a year rate.

Many present agreed and said they plan to make immediate individual application to the village for fire and ambulance protection and urged the officers, "Let's do it right now."

SATURDAY'S MEETING could be called the end of more than four years of bitter arguments between the village and subdivision homeowners. It came after the Jan. 6 death of an Itasca Meadows mother.

Mrs. Jean Pettee, 277 Martha St., eight months pregnant with her sixth child, died of a massive blood clot in her lungs. She was pronounced dead at Alexian Brothers Medical Center three blocks away from her home and her child died a short time later. Her husband had called nearby Elk Grove ambulance for service and the call was referred by Fire Chief Alan Hulet to the Roselle Fire District with which Pettee contracted at $21 a year.

The village and fire department have been criticized for a village policy that directed the chief to respond to uncontracted calls only in a life or death situation. According to the same policy people in nearby unincorporated areas received fire and ambulance service only if they contracted for it. Since the incident the village changed the policy to provide service on a serve-now pay-later plan.

However the interim policy carries a cost of $50 per ambulance call and a charge of $100 per piece of rolling fire equipment.

When Elk Grove Village officials announced the policy they said it would be in effect only while area legislators worked for passage of a rural aid bill that would provide townships with the power to tax unincorporated areas for emergency services. They also pleaded with Itasca-Meadows homeowners to sign a contract for $42 a year.

Residents of Itasca Meadows pay no fire tax to any municipal body and have the option to contract with whomever they choose or go without protection.

In 1964 when Elk Grove Village created its own village fire department Itasca Meadows and other unincorporated areas were disannexed from the Roselle Fire Protection District. Elk Grove Village residents were automatically taxed for service, but Itasca Meadows paid no taxes. Residents there received the emergency service free until October of 1972 when the village announced it would serve only those who paid and contracted for service at $84 a year.

HOMEOWNERS COMMENTED Saturday that the original $84 a year price tag, and what they described as high handed or bullying tactics of some village officials, created animosity that clouded the real issue — fire protection.

Members Saturday made it clear to the officers of the association that they were ready to let bygones be bygones. The majority said they were satisfied with the lower $42 a year price set a year ago.

An initial concern, that the village would attempt to force annexation on the area, was resolved when several homeowners said they may want to annex later if they face a water shortage due to the building of other developments nearby.

Remus first assured the members that village officials have pledged they will not force annexation or even suggest it unless residents petition for annexation.

"You may be begging Elk Grove Village in future years as the 'Devon 53' project that will inevitably be built on the south end of our subdivision goes in and our wells stop producing," he said later.

Mrs. Mary Ostrowski, secretary of the association, fiercely defended her right to remain outside the village and said she still feared forced annexation, with costly amenities like walks and street lighting.

Talk about benefits or penalties of annexation ended when the members decided they were tired of hashing over old arguments and wanted to talk only of the fire and ambulance protection.

A few of those who voted to go to Elk Grove Village for a fire contract, among them Gary Pettee, husband of Mrs. Jean Pettee, insisted they would only do so if the fee was prorated since the contract is from November to November.

Remus was critical of this request. "You will only be criticized again as looking for a free ride," he said. "Sign up now and just chalk up the few dollars as payment for past service," he said. He agreed however to discuss prorating with Elk Grove officials.

ITASCA MEADOWS homeowners met this week-end and voted to contract with Elk Grove Village for fire and ambulance protection. The meeting was spurred by the death of Jean Pettee Jan. 6. Her husband Gary, front row far right, attended and voted to contract with the village.

School environmentalist hopes for OK

Nature area 'needs learning center'

by STIRLING MORITA

A place for environmentally interested pupils to get a closer look at the workings of nature. A place for pupils watching nature's wonders during winter to get warm and work on snowflake collections.

That is what Jim Johnson wants. Johnson, environmental education specialist for Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54, works from a windowless cubbyhole at Robert Frost Junior High School far from the 13-acre Frost Nature Area just north of the school.

Johnson hopes voters will favor a 2,400-square-foot structure in the nature area costing about $62,000. The costs would also include materials for a greenhouse.

The building is part of a $16.5 million school referendum to be held Feb. 18. The referendum is split into two sections — one for an administrative center ($700,000) and the other for building renovation ($3 million), new construction (about $12.5 million) and the nature building.

BECAUSE OF INCREASED assessed valuation and retirement of previously sold bonds, taxes for an average homeowner would not increase if the referendum were passed. School officials estimate that even with passage of the referendum, school taxes for a house assessed at $10,000 would drop $6 at the end of five years. Without the new bond issue, the taxes for that home would decrease $25 to $30.

However, officials are reluctant to predict tax results from the bond issue because many of the bond costs may be taken up by the state. If so, the taxes paid would drop $10 to $12.

Johnson would like to have the nature building to set up displays, demonstrations not only on nature, but also on environmental "quality. The building would blend in with its natural surroundings.

Pupils from all over the district go to the nature center, and Johnson estimated that as many as 10,000 would use the building's facilities during one school year.

The greenhouse would be put together for free by students from industrial arts classes in School Dist. 211.

JOHNSON SAID he envisions having minimal laboratory equipment on counter tops in the proposed building, so pupils could learn about the environment "with immediate reinforcement." Presently, children go to the nature center and have to wait until they return to the classroom, usually at another school, to work on specimens of what they see.

In inclement weather "classes can not go out for more than an hour," he added, but with the building, children could warm up and go out again.

"What we're really doing is extending the educational experience of the kids. In order to really get into nature, you've got to have immediate access to materials and studies," Johnson said.

Many school districts have nature areas, he said, but he's not aware of any that have established a nature building.

THE ENVIRONMENTAL specialist pictures a weather station, an air pollution station, and an electricity-producing windmill as possible future additions to the site. The area includes woodland, marsh, prairie and pond, and efforts are under way to return the prairie and woodland portions of the former cattle grazing area to their natural state, Johnson added. An organic garden next to the building is being considered.

Johnson said the children appear to enjoy themselves at the area.

"At first, the kids thought it was just another field trip, another chance to get out of classroom," he said. "But they're very impressed with the area and enjoy collecting seeds."

The area is used in winter to watch conditions of the land and follow tracks of animal inhabitants. Snowflake collections are made by catching snowflakes on freshly painted lacquer surface to preserve their designs.

"It's kind of an unique situation," Johnson said. "It was the initiative of the school board to do this without federal funds," he added, noting a squeeze has been placed on federal money for environmental studies.

Charged in Wheeling extortion probe

Two indicted county officials leave posts

by BOB CASEY
and AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Two officials indicted last week on extortion charges in connection with a Wheeling zoning case have left their posts with the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals.

Ira Colitz, 58, of 1000 N. Lake Shore Dr., Chicago, resigned his membership on the zoning board and Nicholas Phillips, 39, of 410 W. Marion St., Prospect Heights, was suspended from his $16,000-a-year planner job with the board by County Board President George Dunne.

They were among six men, including James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and two current Wheeling village officials accused by a federal grand jury of extorting a total of $300,000 from developers and builders in return for zoning and other favors.

The two village officials, William Bieber, $21,500-a-year director of building and zoning, and Michael Valenza, former trustee and head of the environmental commission, declined to discuss whether they will resign.

"I have no comment," said Bieber, who was named in four of the six indictments and in a total of 15 counts returned Thursday morning by a special federal grand jury that has been investigating alleged shakedowns in the village for almost a year.

VALENZA, A trustee from 1969 to 1973, said that "under advice of my counsel, I'm not to discuss this with anyone." He is now part owner of a hot dog stand, Do-Dog's Dogs, 636 N. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling.

Valenza, 236 E. Jeffrey Ln., Wheeling, is charged with one count of extortion and one count of conspiracy to commit extortion in connection with a delivery of furniture valued at $1,700 or more he allegedly received as part of a shakedown of Wickes, Inc.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said Friday he had not talked with Bieber or Valenza about the federal charges. Scanlon said the village board may meet tonight in closed session to discuss the indictments.

He said he does not believe Bieber and Valenza should be referred to as village officials. Bieber is an employee of the village and Valenza is a non-salaried appointee as head of the environmental commission, Scanlon said.

Valenza's commission was recently given power to review zoning and planning decisions on proposed developments.

Dunne said Friday the county may

by JILL BETTNER

The Wheeling housewife breathed a sigh of resignation and said, "All I can say is it's about time. I'm not surprised at all, we all knew something was going on."

She had been asked to comment on a six-month federal investigation, that last week resulted in the indictments of six persons on charges of extortion and conspiracy in connection with alleged shakedowns of developers.

Reactions to the arrests by village residents were low-key, in sharp contrast to expressions of "shock" and "surprise" by village officials.

William Bieber, director of building and zoning; Michael Valenza, head of the environmental commission and a former village trustee; and William Hart, former village trustee, were among those indicted by a federal grand jury.

Others named in the indictments were James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, who has played a backstage role in Wheeling politics for more than a decade; Nicholas Phillips, a cousin of Stavros and employee of the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals; and Ira Colitz, a member of the county zoning board and former Democratic state representative from Chicago's 12th District.

THE SIX ARE accused of accepting a total of $300,000 from several developers and from Wickes Inc. in return for village zoning approval, permits and other favors between 1968 and 1973.

"I've heard about Stavros," said housewife Suzanne Kurt, 697 S. Merle Ln. "If he is involved in anything dishonest, I'm glad to have it come to the fore."

Mrs. Kurt said rumors of wrongdoing by village officials and others have been widespread in the community. Like other residents, she said indictments in Wheeling weren't unexpected after the recent arrests in Hoffman Estates and the shady deals uncovered in other suburbs by U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office.

"It seems like you get a little bit of this all over," she said. "I think people have just kind of become immune to it — they're not surprised by anything. I hope it won't create too much of an attitude of complete distrust. There are good guys and bad guys, but sometimes it's difficult to tell the difference."

"I think it's terrible about the arrests; here, but with so much crooked stuff going on in the world, I'd expect anything," said Charles Krueger, proving Mrs. Kurt's point.

EDWARD Mahoney, 1450 Sandpebble Dr., raised the question of the possible effect that allowing builders to bend or break village building codes could have on the village in years to come.

"Nobody likes public officials stealing from the people and everything," Mahoney commented. "With all those condominiums they're jamming down our throats, we're going to have some terrible flooding problems in the future."

QUALITY CONTROL is essential. Tapes are constantly checked to make sure tracks or programs fall in the right order and the tape is labeled correctly. Ampex Corp., Music Division in Elk Grove Village, the largest producer of stereo prerecorded tapes in the United States turns out about 2 million tapes every month.

The tape story

Ampex Corp. pumping out millions of 8-track tapes

by BOB GALLAS

A popular rumor is that 8-track tapes will soon be as obsolete as a $2 bill due to the smaller cassette tape. The rumor, probably started by owners of cassette tape players, couldn't be farther from the truth, according to officials of the Ampex Corp., music division in Elk Grove Village, which churns out more than 25 million tapes each year, 79 per cent of which are 8-track.

Even though business is booming, Ampex plant manager Gene Nyland contends the industry is "still in its infancy." The continuous play tape was first manufactured in the United States only seven years ago by Ampex.

The two shifts of 750 employees at the Ampex production plant at 2201 Lunt Ave., work 18 hours a day in an effort to keep up with the demand for 8-track tapes, which after a successful play of the popular car tape players, are now finding their way into home stereo systems as well.

ABOUT 76 MILLION prerecorded tapes are produced in the United States every year, one-third of which are manufactured by Ampex, the largest single producer of prerecorded tapes in the country.

Besides turning out tapes for more than 130 record labels such as Motown, London, Buddah, Parrot and Deutsche Grammophon, the company also supplies such well known distributors such as the Columbia Record Club and the Longines Symphonette.

One look at Ampex's 8-track production lines will erase any doubt about the future of 8-track tapes. Latest industry figures for the first eight months of 1973, show that 8-track and reel-to-reel tapes sales gained, while cassette sales dropped 2 per cent.

The "birth" of the cartridge takes place in a special production room, where duplicate production tapes or "dubs" are made from still another copy of the actual studio recording session.

A PROBLEM corrected there is the dividing of the recording into four equal segments or "tracks."

The dubs are then spliced together in a continuous loop and put on a machine called the "master," which will transfer the recording at high speed — 16 times faster than the tape is normally played — to 10 duplicating machines or "slaves," which are hooked up to each master. Each slave produces a row of 18 cartridge-size tapes every 15 minutes, which contain the same amount of music on a long-playing record album.

Although the tapes are copied at high speeds, virtually no quality in the recording is lost, according to Robert Jilke of Ampex.

The recorded reels then travel to the assembly line where they are united with a cartridge, spliced together by hand in a continuous loop, then automatically labeled, wrapped and boxed for shipment, all within about one minute.

THROUGHOUT THE process, tapes are constantly being pulled off the assembly line and checked not for quality, but for basics such as making sure track two follows track one and that Engelbert Humperdinck isn't singing on a tape with Frank Sinatra's picture on it.

The actual sound check of the tape is handled by a special computer, which compares the sound of finished cartridges pulled off the assembly line, to the original master recording.

Tapes leaving the facility go out to distributors throughout the United States and Canada. An Ampex manufacturing plant in Belgium supplies Europe. Still other tapes stay in the plant, and are sent to the mail order section, where customers can order any tape made by Ampex through the mails, selecting from an Ampex catalog.

Speed is essential in shipping, according to Nyland. "When an artist is hot, you'd better be able to get the tape out," said Nyland. "We ship everything by air — it's got to get there within 24 hours," he added.

THE BIGGEST time of the year for tape manufacturers is fall, according to Nyland, which could be due partially to the usual back-to-school rush as kids going off to college stock up on tapes for their tape players.

Although the industry relies heavily on petroleum produced plastics for tapes and cartridges, the fuel shortage hasn't had any effect on Ampex so far, even though it expects to use almost 6½ billion feet of recording tape this year.

That's enough tape to string from New York to San Francisco 464 times, according to Ampex officials. Or enough to wrap around the world 49½ times, with enough tape left over to tie a large bow.

ROWS OF "SLAVES," or duplicating machines, transfer the tape from large, bulk rows to smaller, cartridge-size reels. At the same time, programs of music are put onto the smaller reels at a speed 16 times as fast as the tape normally would be played on conventional equipment, thus speeding up the process.

TAPES ARE SPICED together by hand to form a continuous loop of long-playing music. Ampex produces four times as many 8-track tapes than the smaller cassette type, a newer kind of tapes for their industry.

Attempt to break into gas pump here fails

Some desperate motorist went to great lengths to get a tank of gas when he broke the lock and nozzle on an outside pump at a local company.

According to Elk Grove Village Police, the attempted theft and damage to property occurred last week at the Lavin Roofing Co., 2239 Pratt Blvd.

Owner Linoos Shier told police the attempt was futile because the pump was shut off. The damage was discovered Thursday morning.

Drug abuse: how widespread is it in our local schools?

by REGINA OEHLER

Parents of high school, junior high school and even elementary school children are concerned about what has been described as a national problem — drug use by students.

Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 has been hit by a slew of PTA and PTSA meetings on drug abuse. Recently, a representative from the Cook County Superintendent's Office requested permission to hold another drug abuse seminar this spring as part of a countywide project.

The PTA presidents who gave specific reasons for holding meetings on drugs said that parents had requested the meeting in a PTA survey. Others said they were holding the meeting because drugs were a national problem.

Information on whether junior high students are using drugs to any great extent is difficult to obtain, and information often is contradictory.

THE MAJORITY of school officials and law enforcement agents say drug use by those of pre-high school age is minimal.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis

Case said the number of young juveniles arrested for drug use is small compared to the total. He said there is no real drug traffic in elementary and junior high schools.

He added that when youngsters are picked up, usually the parents are brought to the police station and counseled. "The kids should know too that they're really being taken in on this marijuana because the stuff they get growing around here is really nothing," Case said.

Palatine Police Dept. Juvenile Officer

Ralph Winkelhake says he has information that "certain individuals" are selling drugs in the junior highs. But he said the problem is more evident in the high schools.

In the schools themselves, Dist. 15 youngsters start drug education in kindergarten and continue through eighth grade. This is part of a state required program.

Kindergarten students learn about the dangers of going into their parent's medicine cabinet. Older youngsters talk

Opinions on drugs in junior highs

• Bob Craft, coordinator of the family counseling program at The Bridge, a Palatine youth service center: "This year has really been the year that junior highs are faced with more of a problem."

• Palatine Juvenile Officer Ralph Winkelhake: "There is evidence that certain individuals are at the junior highs and selling" drugs. "An 11-year-old was the youngest we have arrested." He said most students arrested are in high school rather than junior high.

• Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case: "The percentage (of junior high school youngsters caught using drugs) is small compared to the total we get. Most

Five months past original target

Birchwood Park rec center completion expected May 1

Completion of the Birchwood Park recreation center is due May 1, five months behind the original target date.

Materials shortages have been blamed for much of the delay, although some park officials are disgruntled with what they believe has been slow construction due to a low priority put on the project by some contractors.

The Birchwood Park gymnasium and swimming pool was the major item in the $1.4 million referendum passed in October, 1972. It is being constructed at Illinois and Bennett avenues.

Nearly all projects approved in the 1972 referendum are finished or ready for completion this summer. Construction of a remaining stretch of the Palatine Trail was awarded last week to Robert R. Anderson Co. for $59,737.50. The same firm won a $14,599 contract for construction of two tennis courts at Locust Park.

THE LATEST BIDS are 10 per cent under the park's estimate for the work. When the portion of the trail and the tennis courts are finished, one small segment of the nature and hiking trail will remain incomplete, pending an easement agreement between the park board and Old Madrid apartment developers. Park officials are attempting to get permission to run the trail through a northern edge of the Old Madrid property, located northeast of the Northwest Highway-Hicks Road intersection.

Purchase of a large fairway mower and two putting green mowers was also approved recently for $34,031.20 for the Palatine Hills golf course.

Park commissioners are also working on an agreement with the village of Palatine and developers of a new apartment project just west of the golf course driveway on Northwest Highway. Park director Fred B. Hall will talk with village officials soon about installing a fire hydrant on park property near the project. In turn, the park district plans to request a small access strip of land currently owned by Cobblestone Court developers, which would give public access to the southern edge of the golf course lake.

Trade may get Countryside area for park district

The Rolling Meadows Park District has taken the first step toward gaining a land corridor that would legally allow it to annex the Plum Grove Countryside area.

The first closed-door meeting to discuss a trade of property between the Rolling Meadows Park District and the Salt Creek Park District was held Saturday, and according to both park board presidents, talks are going well.

Salt Creek Park Board President Patrick Grealish, said both park boards will discuss the matter at meetings this week. No future meetings between representatives of the two districts have been set to date, but both park board presidents said future meetings would be held.

If successful, the trade provides the Rolling Meadows Park District with an annexation corridor to the $4 million assessed valuation Countryside district.

The Rolling Meadows district could then move to absorb the Countryside district through a referendum. Voters in the Countryside district would have to approve the referendum before the actual annexation could be made.

The Countryside district encompasses an approximate four-acre site bounded by Winnetka Avenue on the north, Kirchoff Road on the south, Hicks Road on the east and Meacham Road on the west.

The district, formed as a protective taxing body in 1967, includes an estimated 300 single-family homes and the Kings Walk apartments Park taxes, now at 21 cents per $100 assessed valuation would increase to 45 cents under the Rolling Meadows Park District.

COUNTRYSIDE RESIDENTS usually have been allowed to take part in Rolling Meadows district events at in-district rates due to yearly negotiations between 1st ward aldermen Thomas Scanlon and Merrill Wuerch and Rolling Meadows park officials.

Parks sponsor trip to Cougars, Jets game

The Salt Creek Park District will sponsor a bus tomorrow to the World Hockey Assn. game between the Chicago Cougars and the Winnipeg Jets.

The Jets and former Chicago Black Hawk star Bobby Hull will be making their final appearance of the season at the game to be held at the Amphitheatre in Chicago.

A bus will leave from Rose Park, 530 S. Williams Dr., at 6:15 p.m. Cost will be $6 for the first member of a family and $5.50 for each additional member. Cost includes transportation and admission.

Persons interested in registering for the game may call the district at 259-6890.

Impeachment group to meet with Crane

Congressman says position is 'neutral'

Impeach Nixon Committee members will meet with U. S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, to make him aware of the impeachment sentiment in his district.

The meeting was agreed to by Crane on Friday after 12 committee and Independent Voters of Illinois members confronted him at a flagpole dedication at Samuel Kirk Developmental Training Center in Palatine. No date has been set for the meeting, but Crane indicated he might not be available until early March.

They sought out Crane to ask for the conference after four weeks of trying to set up a meeting through his staff proved futile, said Anne Holiday, an Impeach Nixon Committee coordinator.

The committee will present Crane with petitions signed by residents of his district calling for Nixon's impeachment at the meeting in an attempt to get the impeachment process under way so the involvement, if any, of President Nixon in recent scandals can be determined.

Crane turned down an invitation from the two groups to represent pro-Nixon forces in a debate on impeachment planned for Feb. 24.

"My position is absolutely neutral," said Crane, because he will be a member of the grand jury which might impeach Nixon.

IMPEACH NIXON forces confronted U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, at a flagpole dedication at Samuel Kirk Center Friday. Crane agreed to a future meeting with the group to discuss impeachment sentiment.

about the effects of drugs on the body.

TO TRY TO insure that drugs remain out of the schools, Dist. 15 has a policy of regular locker checks. School policy also requires every youngster have a doctor's request to use prescription drugs.

Deputy Supt. Joseph Kiszka said parent permission is not required for student searches, as long as the youngsters are informed of the district's policy regarding those searches. Basically, the policy states that any youngster suspected of concealing an illegal substance may be searched.

Any youngster caught with any type of drug, including vitamin pills, is liable to suspension, said Plum Grove Junior High School Principal Charles Atkinson. Some students have been suspended for possession of vitamins, he added.

No figures on the number of students suspended for the misuse of drugs are available.

THREE OF THE four Dist. 15 junior high school principals interviewed by The Herald say that the problem is "minimal" or that there is very little drug use among the youngsters. None will deny that some in the junior high school probably are using drugs.

The fourth principal estimated that 10 to 15 per cent perhaps as many as 35 per cent, have tried drugs.

Several students, independently, have come up with a figure of 20 per cent for each of the junior high schools. Others say they have no knowledge of drugs among their peers.

Bob Craft, coordinator of family counseling at the Bridge, a Palatine-based youth service center, said that many more junior high school age youngsters than ever before were calling the Bridge and asking about drugs. No specific figures are available.

Craft said that most of the calls concern PCP or Quaaludes. PCP, sometimes called "angel dust," "THC" or "animal tranquilizer," is a veterinary anesthetic called Sernyl. Quaalude, a Methaqualone drug, is described as an addictive barbiturate or "downer."

VERY FEW of the phone calls concern marijuana. "It's everywhere," Craft said. "Only parents seem worried about it any more."

Students say that most drug use goes on outside of the school. Week-end parties and small, very limited groups — when parents are out of the house — account for most of the illegal drug use, they say.

One student described an incident when a youngster brought a bag of oregano — which resembles marijuana — to school and dropped it in front of a teacher he disliked. The teacher fell for the trick, and dragged the student to the principal.

"The principal took a look at it, smelled it and said 'get out of here,'" the girl added.

ANOTHER STUDENT was almost suspended for selling speed until a chemical analysis revealed the item in question was merely a cold capsule, said George McKown, principal of Winston Park Junior High School in Palatine.

"I hear that everyone knows where to get it (marijuana)," McKown said. E. Daniel Vucovich, principal of Carl Sandburg Junior High School, also said he had heard students say everyone knows where to get drugs, but added that might just be talk.

• Dist. 15 Deputy Supt. Joseph Kiszka: "I'm not discounting the fact that drugs are being used. How prevalent it is, I don't know."

• Charles Atkinson, principal at Plum Grove Junior High School, Palatine: "Just by the number of kids we've talked to, it appears that more youngsters this year are using drugs than last year."

• Donald Stipe, principal of Palatine Hills Junior High School, Palatine: "If drugs were rampant, we'd come across some instances of drug use at school and we have not." He added that it was difficult to catch youngsters passing drugs. "You'd almost have to want to be seen to have someone see you."

• George McKown, principal at Winston Park Junior High School, Palatine: "We have no way of knowing (the amount of drug use in the junior high school). If the kids are doing it, they're keeping it awfully quiet."

• E. Daniel Vucovich, principal at Carl Sandburg Junior High School, Rolling Meadows: "I've not come across any drug situation during school times in the school building. If 10 per cent (80 kids) were on drugs, we'd be tripping over them. We'd have to be blind not to know what's going on."

Parks discuss trade of land

State laws require taxing bodies to border on property when they seek to annex.

The trade under discussion would apparently give Rolling Meadows the parcel of land needed to annex Countryside. Salt Creek may get a portion of the $6.9 million industrial area now owned by Rolling Meadows.

Preschool under way

Program for kids with learning disabilities enters its first full year of operations

by REGINA OEHLER

The Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 preschool program is in its first full year of operation with 29 children enrolled.

The program was piloted last spring after state guidelines requiring preschool education for youngsters with learning problems.

Classes are made up of three and four-year-olds who attend sessions at Central Road School in Rolling Meadows.

THE CHILDREN eligible for the program do not necessarily have low IQs. The majority have perceptual problems such as hearing difficulties. Others simply haven't had enough experience communicating or coordinating their muscles.

Youngsters with serious difficulties are referred to other educational programs in the Northwest suburbs.

"We find a lot of youngsters with speech and communication problems," Mrs. Foster said. The youngsters are tested through Dist. 15, and those eligible are enrolled in the preschool program.

Parents whose children are slow to learn to talk, have difficulty playing with other youngsters, or have trouble putting puzzle pieces together are encouraged to have their youngsters tested.

THE CLASSES basically teach skills that the children will need in kindergarten, such as walking up and down steps, feeling textures and learning to listen and learning to recognize shapes.

It does not include learning to read, practicing math or getting a head start in any specific academic areas.

"We are not a day-care center, nor do we recreate the school program," said Harriet Foster, director of special education. She said the program simply tries to help youngsters develop coordination, listening skills and language skills.

Though children can learn to read at three and four, it is much easier for them to learn the skill at a later date, according to educational surveys.

THE PRESCHOOL classes, if based on individualized education such as Dist. 15's, can help a youngster improve learning skills and can also raise his IQ, according to studies based on Project Head Start and other experimental early childhood education programs.

"We feel that the little bit we see them — twice or three times a week — is not depriving them of their mothers' care," Mrs. Foster said. "We are supplementing what the mother does for the child."

Part of the program is educating parents so they can coordinate their efforts with the preschool program.

Each of the classes has a teacher and a teacher aide. Class sizes are limited to seven. A speech therapist works with the children who have speech problems and a nurse comes in occasionally to help the youngsters who have physical defects, such as hearing problems.

Drug alarm

Parents, students alarmed over growing use of drugs in area grade schools

by REGINA OEHLE

Parents of high school, junior high school and even elementary school children are concerned about what has been described as a national problem — drug use by students.

Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 has been hit by a slew of PTA and PTSA meetings on drug abuse. Recently, a representative from the Cook County Superintendent's Office requested permission to hold another drug abuse seminar this spring as part of a countywide project.

The PTA presidents who gave specific reasons for holding meetings on drugs said that parents had requested the meeting in a PTA survey. Others said they were holding the meeting because drugs were a national problem.

Information on whether junior high students are using drugs to any great extent is difficult to obtain, and information often is contradictory.

THE MAJORITY of school officials and law enforcement agents say drug use by those of pre-high school age is minimal.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis Case said the number of young juveniles arrested for drug use is small compared to the total. He said there is no real drug traffic in elementary and junior high schools.

He added that when youngsters are picked up, usually the parents are brought to the police station and counseled. "The kids should know too that they're really being taken in on this marijuana because the stuff they get growing around here is really nothing," Case said.

Palatine Police Dept. Juvenile Officer Ralph Winkelhake says he has information that "certain individuals" are selling drugs in the junior highs. But he said the problem is more evident in the high schools.

In the schools themselves, Dist. 15 youngsters start drug education in kindergarten and continue through eighth grade. This is part of a state required program.

Kindergarten students learn about the dangers of going into their parent's medicine cabinet. Older youngsters talk about the effects of drugs on the body.

TO TRY to insure that drugs remain out of the schools, Dist. 15 has a policy of regular locker checks. School policy also requires every youngster have a doctor's request to use prescription drugs.

Deputy Supt. Joseph Kiszka said parent permission is not required for student searches, as long as the youngsters are informed of the district's policy regarding those searches. Basically, the policy states that any youngster suspected of concealing an illegal substance may be searched.

Officials differ on problem

• Bob Craft, coordinator of the family counseling program at The Bridge, a Palatine youth service center: "This year has really been the year that junior highs are faced with more of a problem."

• Palatine Juvenile Officer Ralph Winkelhake: "There is evidence that certain individuals are at the junior highs and selling" drugs. "An 11-year-old was the youngest we have arrested." He said most students arrested are in high school rather than junior high.

• Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case: "The percentage of junior high school youngsters caught using drugs is small compared to the total we get. Valenza, 236 E. Jeffrey Ln., Wheeling, is charged with one count of extortion and one count of conspiracy to commit extortion in connection with a delivery of furniture valued at $1,700 or more he allegedly received as part of a shakedown of Wickes, Inc.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said Friday he had not talked with Bieber or Valenza about the federal charges. Scanlon said the village board may meet tonight in closed session to discuss the indictments.

He said he does not believe Bieber and Valenza should be referred to as village officials. Bieber is an employee of the village and Valenza is a non-salaried appointee as head of the environmental commission, Scanlon said.

Valenza's commission was recently given power to review zoning and planning decisions on proposed developments.

Impeachment group to meet with Crane

Congressman says position is 'neutral'

Impeach Nixon Committee members will meet with U. S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, to make him aware of the impeachment sentiment in his district.

The meeting was agreed to by Crane on Friday after 12 committee and Independent Voters of Illinois members confronted him at a flagpole dedication at Samuel Kirk Developmental Training Center in Palatine. No date has been set for the meeting, but Crane indicated he might not be available until early March.

They sought out Crane to ask for the conference after four weeks of trying to set up a meeting through his staff proved futile, said Anne Holiday, an Impeach Nixon Committee coordinator.

The committee will present Crane with petitions signed by residents of his district calling for Nixon's impeachment at the meeting in an attempt to get the impeachment process under way so the involvement, if any, of President Nixon in recent scandals can be determined.

Crane turned down an invitation from the two groups to represent pro-Nixon forces in a debate on impeachment planned for Feb. 24.

"My position is absolutely neutral," said Crane, because he will be a member of the grand jury which might impeach Nixon.

Park districts discuss land trade

The Rolling Meadows Park District has taken the first step toward gaining a land corridor that would legally allow it to annex the Plum Grove Countryside area.

The first closed-door meeting to discuss a trade of property between the Rolling Meadows Park District and the Salt Creek Park District was held Saturday, and according to both park board presidents, talks are going well.

Salt Creek Park Board President Patrick Grealish, said both park boards will discuss the matter at meetings this week. No future meetings between representatives of the two districts have been set to date, but both park board presidents said future meetings would be held.

If successful, the trade provides the Rolling Meadows Park District with an annexation corridor to the $4 million assessed valuation Countryside district.

The Rolling Meadows district could then move to absorb the Countryside district through a referendum. Voters in the Countryside district would have to approve the referendum before the actual annexation could be made.

The Countryside district encompasses an approximate four-acre site bounded by Winnetka Avenue on the north, Kirchhoff Road on the south, Hicks Road on the east and Meacham Road on the west.

The district, formed as a protective taxing body in 1967, includes an estimated 300 single-family homes and the Kings Walk apartments. Park taxes, now

Residents 'not surprised' by shakedown

by JILL BETTNER

The Wheeling housewife breathed a sigh of resignation and said, "All I can say is it's about time. I'm not surprised at all, we all knew something was going on."

She had been asked to comment on a six-month federal investigation, that last week resulted in the indictments of six persons on charges of extortion and conspiracy in connection with alleged shakedowns of developers.

Reactions to the arrests by village residents were low-key, in sharp contrast to expressions of "shock" and "surprise" by village officials.

William Bieber, director of building and zoning; Michael Valenza, head of the environmental commission and a former village trustee; and William Hart, former village trustee, were among those indicted by a federal grand jury.

Others named in the indictments were James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, who has played a backstage role in Wheeling politics for more than a decade; Nicholas Phillips, a cousin of Stavros and employee of the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals; and Ira Collitz, a member of the county zoning board and former Democratic state representative from Chicago's 12th District.

THE SIX ARE accused of accepting a total of $300,000 from several developers and from Wickes Inc. in return for village zoning approval, permits and other favors between 1968 and 1973.

"I've heard about Stavros," said housewife Suzanne Kurt, 667 S. Merle Ln. "If he is involved in anything dishonest, I'm glad to have it come to the fore."

Mrs. Kurt said rumors of wrongdoing by village officials and others have been widespread in the community. Like other residents, she said indictments in Wheeling weren't unexpected after the recent arrests in Hoffman Estates and the shady deals uncovered in other suburbs by U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office.

"It seems like you get a little bit of this all over," she said. "I think people have just kind of become immune to it — they're not surprised by anything. I hope it won't create too much of an attitude of complete distrust. There are good guys and bad guys, but sometimes it's difficult to tell the difference."

"I think it's terrible about the arrests here, but with so much crooked stuff going on in the world, I'd expect anything," said Charles Krueger, proving Mrs. Kurt's point.

EDWARD Mahoney, 1450 Sandpebble Dr., raised the question of the possible effect that allowing builders to bend or break village building codes could have on the village in years to come.

"Nobody likes public officials stealing from the people and everything," Mahoney commented. "With all these condominiums they're jamming down our throats, we're going to have some terrible flooding problems in the future."

State rep won't table missing cloth

by BOB LAHEY

A state representative has threatened to bring the weight of the Illinois Attorney General's Office to bear on an Arlington Heights merchant over a $3.80 package of laundry which lay unclaimed in his store for four months.

In a letter to Dryden Cleaners, Inc., written on General Assembly stationery, Rep. Virginia B. Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, said she was giving the operator of the establishment until Feb. 12 to find a table cloth she claims was lost from her laundry.

Unless the table cloth is found, or a "reasonable settlement" is offered, she said she would appeal to the Consumer Fraud Division of the attorney general's office for relief.

Details of the incident were related, at the Herald's request, by Emmanuel Baum, who has operated the cleaning business in Arlington Heights since 1963.

REPEATED attempts to contact Mrs.

Macdonald over the weekend were unsuccessful.

According to Baum, the dispute began on Jan. 23. He gave this account:

On that day, a woman he did not know entered the store and asked for a laundry package in the name of Macdonald.

When he presented the package to her, the woman demanded to know its contents. Baum told her he did not know what the package contained. He said the woman criticized him for not knowing what his customers brought in.

However, she paid him the $3.80 and then decided to open the package to inspect the contents. She first declared that the sheets and pillow case in the package did not belong to her, Baum said, and then charged that the sheets had been scorched.

Baum said he explained that laundry received by him is jobbed out (to a laundry in Skokie) and asked her what she expected him to do.

He said that she demanded that he enter a claim with the Skokie laundry for her. It was then, Baum said, that he checked the number on the package against his ledger and discovered that the laundry had been received on Sept. 24, 1973. The handwritten ledger, under that date, shows an entry: "8859 Macdonald 2 sheets, 2 cloths."

BAUM SAID he told her he could not make a claim against the laundry firm after four months. (He told the Herald he is not liable for unclaimed goods left in his store for more than 30 days. Laundry from the Skokie plant is normally returned in two or three days, "not more than a week," he said.)

Baum said the woman then asked if he knew who she was. When he said he did not, she identified herself as Virginia Macdonald, adding "I am the state representative for this area." (Mrs. Macdonald is one of three state representatives in the 3rd Legislative District. Dryden Cleaners, in fact, is located in the 4th Legislative District.)

Baum said Mrs. Macdonald then "stormed out" of his store and he heard no more from her until he received her letter, dated Jan. 28, 1974. It reads:

"INASMUCH AS you claimed no responsibility and refused to make any effort to replace the missing table cloth or adjust the laundry charge for the scorched, badly laundered sheets and pillow cases when I picked up my laundry in your establishment on January 23rd, I plan to take action.

"If by February 12th you have not found the table cloth which you have lost or offered a reasonable settlement, I will refer this case to the Consumer Fraud Division of the Illinois Attorney General's Office."

Baum said he has shown the letter to his attorney, and plans to have it enlarged and framed for hanging above the cash register in his store.

Sheriff's police to get $806,116 in wheel tax

Accumulated county wheel tax revenue totaling $806,116 will be used to furnish the new Cook County Sheriff's Police central headquarters under construction in Maywood.

The money has been kept in an interest-bearing escrow account pending an Illinois Supreme Court decision on the constitutionality of the tax, which was to be levied after Jan. 1, 1972. The court ruled Thursday that the tax is reasonable under the county home-rule powers because most municipalities in the county already levy such a tax.

The Wheel Tax Ordinance revenue act requires income to be spent in the sheriff's department, although after this year the money will be part of the sheriff's budget and the "excess" could be shifted elsewhere in the county budget.

COOK COUNTY Board Pres. George Dunne said the first money will be used in the new sheriff's headquarters in addition to the department's share of the 1974 county budget.

The accumulated account is from residents of unincorporated areas who have purchased the stickers for two years with the understanding the money would be repaid from the escrow account if the tax were ruled unconstitutional.

The first year the tax was collected, 45,900 stickers were issued, bringing that year's account to $675,297. Many motorists chose to ignore the disputed tax in 1973, and the county collected only $130,819 from the sale of 9,500 stickers. So far this year, $345 has been collected.

Motorists who fail to renew their stickers or obtain them for the first time can get applications at county sheriff's stations in the Northwest Suburbs, on Milwaukee Avenue in Niles. The applications are also available at most township offices, according to a spokesman from the county treasurer's office. They can be obtained in person only at the county collector's office, 118 N. Clark St., Room 112, Chicago.

The stickers range from $10 to $15 for cars, depending on size, and up to $95 for trucks. Checks or money orders for the proper amount must be mailed with the applications.

ALTHOUGH THE stickers expire at the end of each calendar year, there is no deadline yet. Most municipalities issuing such stickers have a deadline of Feb. 15, but Bill Schroeder of the county management service office said there may be a question of enough time to meet that deadline. He said it will depend on availability of applications and ability of persons to get them through the mail in time.

Sticker owners did not receive renewal applications in the mail this year because of the cost and the uncertainty the tax would be upheld. Schroeder said renewal forms will likely be mailed out in the future.

at 21 cents per $100 assessed valuation would increase to 45 cents under the Rolling Meadows Park District.

COUNTRYSIDE RESIDENTS usually have been allowed to take part in Rolling Meadows district events at in-district rates due to yearly negotiations between 1st ward aldermen Thomas Scanlan and Merrill Wuerch and Rolling Meadows park officials.

The annexation "is something we've been trying to do since about 1965," said Rolling Meadows Park Board President Raymond Neukirch. Blocking the annexations has been a small parcel of land owned by Salt Creek that separates Rolling Meadows from Countryside. The parcel is near Hicks Road and Euclid Avenue.

State laws require taxing bodies to border on property when they seek to annex.

The trade under discussion would apparently give Rolling Meadows the parcel of land needed to annex Countryside. Salt Creek may get a portion of the $5.9 million industrial area now owned by Rolling Meadows.

Modern dance classes offered for children

Registration is now being taken for the next session of modern dance classes for children at the Salt Creek Park District.

Lessons are offered at Rose Park, 530 S. Williams Dr. The six-week session will begin Saturday, Feb. 9. Cost is $5.50 for residents, $7 for nonresidents. Register by calling 259-6890.

Preschool under way

Program for kids with learning disabilities enters its first full year of operations

by REGINA OEHLER

The Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 preschool program is in its first full year of operation with 29 children enrolled.

The program was piloted last spring after state guidelines requiring preschool education for youngsters with learning problems.

Classes are made up of three and four-year-olds who attend sessions at Central Road School in Rolling Meadows.

THE CHILDREN eligible for the program do not necessarily have low IQs. The majority have perceptual problems such as hearing difficulties. Others simply haven't had enough experience communicating or coordinating their muscles.

Youngsters with serious difficulties are referred to other educational programs in the Northwest suburbs.

"We find a lot of youngsters with speech and communication problems," Mrs. Foster said. The youngsters are tested through Dist. 15, and those eligible are enrolled in the preschool program.

Parents whose children are slow to learn to talk, have difficulty playing with other youngsters, or have trouble putting puzzle pieces together are encouraged to have their youngsters tested.

THE CLASSES basically teach skills that the children will need in kindergarten, such as walking up and down steps, feeling textures and learning to listen and learning to recognize shapes.

It does not include learning to read, practicing math or getting a head start in any specific academic areas.

"We are not a day-care center, nor do we recreate the school program," said Harriet Foster, director of special education. She said the program simply tries to help youngsters develop coordination, listening skills and language skills.

Though children can learn to read at three and four, it is much easier for them to learn the skill at a later date, according to educational surveys.

THE PRESCHOOL classes, if based on individualized education such as Dist. 15's, can help a youngster improve learning skills and can also raise his IQ, according to studies based on Project Head Start and other experimental early childhood education programs.

"We feel that the little bit we see them — twice or three times a week — is not depriving them of their mothers' care," Mrs. Foster said. "We are supplementing what the mother does for the child."

Part of the program is educating parents so they can coordinate their efforts with the preschool program.

Each of the classes has a teacher and a teacher aide. Class sizes are limited to seven. A speech therapist works with the children who have speech problems and a nurse comes in occasionally to help the youngsters who have physical defects, such as hearing problems.

Police seek applicants

Applications for testing for the Rolling Meadows police department are available at the police station, 3600 Kirchoff Road, for persons interested in joining the department.

Applicants must be 21 to 34 years old to take the oral and physical tests which will be given Feb. 23 at Rolling Meadows High School. Minimum height for the department is 5 feet 9 inches. Maximum height is 6 feet 4 inches.

Weight of applicants must correspond to height within a range of 145 to 230 pounds.

The tests will be given to fill one vacancy on the force and to establish an eligibility list from which future policemen may be drawn.

Those selected must live within a seven-mile radius of the city once joining the force.

PTA notes

"Being Aware," a drug-abuse program, will be presented by the Central Road School PTA at 8 p.m. Feb. 5, in the school gym, 3600 Central Rd.

A panel of teenagers from High School Dist. 214 will discuss drugs. After the presentation, a question-and-answer period will be held.

"Crossed Wires," a play illustrating the problems of a family with a youngster who has a learning difficulty will highlight the Feb. 6 Northwest Suburban PTA Council meeting.

The meeting begins at 1 p.m. in Christ Lutheran Church, 41 S. Rohlfing Rd., Palatine. Arnon DeGuisne, Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 school psychologist will be available to answer questions. Harriet Foster, Dist. 15 director of special education, also will explain the district's learning disabilities program for students who have a learning difficulty.

Free nursery service is available.

Diana Olson, nominating committee chairman, will present a slate of officers for election. Included are Jody Albrecht, president; Elizabeth Montgomery, first vice president; Joanna Youman, second vice president; Carol Zempel, recording secretary; and Dolores Galkowski, treasurer. Nominations will be accepted from the floor.

Girl Scout drive for members on Rolling Meadows Girl Scouts are in the midst of their annual two-week Sustaining Membership Enrollment fund drive.

Girl Scout Representatives will be knocking on the doors of Girl Scout families, asking for a $10 contribution per family, until Feb. 12.

James Palluck, 3618 Kirchoff Rd., is chairman of this year's Rolling Meadows fund drive. Palluck, who has served as chairman for the last three years, is also a member of the Campsites and Facilities Committee of the Northwest Girl Scout Council and leads Junior Girl Scout Troop 808.

The majority of the money collected will go towards the upkeep of two Wisconsin Girl Scout camps, Happy Hollow and NORWESCO, according to officials. The rest goes into the general Girl Scout fund.

The fund drive, which provides seven per cent of all Girl Scout revenues, "is our inflation heater and budget balancer," said Clarize Hall, executive director of the Northwest Girl Scout Council.

The financial goal for Northwest Cook County this year is $33,000.

School environmentalist thinks students should learn of nature's workings firsthand

by STIRLING MORITA

A place for environmentally interested pupils to get a closer look at the workings of nature. A place for pupils watching nature's wonders during winter to get warm and work on snowflake collections.

That is what Jim Johnson wants. Johnson, environmental education specialist for Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54, works from a windowless cubbyhole at Robert Frost Junior High School far from the 13-acre Frost Nature Area just north of the school.

Johnson hopes voters will favor a 2,400-square-foot structure in the nature area costing about $62,000. The costs would also include materials for a greenhouse.

The building is part of a $16.8 million school referendum to be held Feb. 16. The referendum is split into two sections — one for an administrative center ($700,000) and the other for building renovation ($3 million), new construction (about $12.8 million) and the nature building.

BECAUSE OF INCREASED assessed valuation and retirement of previously sold bonds, taxes for an average homeowner would not increase if the referendum were passed. School officials estimate that even with passage of the referendum, school taxes for a house assessed at $10,000 would drop $6 at the end of five years. Without the new bond issue, the taxes for that home would decrease $25 to $30.

However, officials are reluctant to predict tax results from the bond issue because many of the bond costs may be taken up by the state. If so, the taxes paid would drop $10 to $12.

Johnson would like to have the nature building to set up displays, demonstrations not only on nature, but also on environmental quality. The building would blend in with its natural surroundings.

Pupils from all over the district go to the nature center, and Johnson estimated that as many as 10,000 would use the building's facilities during one school year.

The greenhouse would be put together for free by students from industrial arts classes in School Dist. 211.

JOHNSON SAID he envisions having minimal laboratory equipment on counter tops in the proposed building, so pupils could learn about the environment "with immediate reinforcement." Presently, children go to the nature center and have to wait until they return to the classroom, usually at another school, to work on specimens of what they see.

In inclement weather "classes can not go out for more than an hour," he added, but with the building, children could warm up and go out again.

"What we're really doing is extending the educational experience of the kids. In order to really get into nature, you've got to have immediate access to materials and studies," Johnson said.

Many school districts have nature areas, he said, but he's not aware of any that have established a nature building.

THE ENVIRONMENTAL specialist pictures a weather station, an air pollution station, and an electricity-producing windmill as possible future additions to the site. The area includes woodland, marsh, prairie and pond, and efforts are under way to return the prairie and woodland portions of the former cattle grazing area to their natural state, Johnson added. An organic garden next to the building is being considered.

Johnson said the children appear to enjoy themselves at the area.

"At first, the kids thought it was just another field trip, another chance to get out of classroom," he said. "But they're very impressed with the area and enjoy collecting seeds."

The area is used in winter to watch conditions of the land and follow tracks of animal inhabitants. Snowflake collections are made by catching snowflakes on freshly painted lacquer surface to preserve their designs.

"It's kind of an unique situation," Johnson said. "It was the initiative of the school board to do this without federal funds," he added, noting a squeeze has been placed on federal money for environmental studies.

Johnson said the children appear to enjoy themselves at the area.

Two board seats are up for election. Terms of Adam Jelen Jr. and Sherwood Spatz expire this year. Neither one has indicated if he will seek reelection.

Petitions will be accepted from Feb. 27 through March 22 at the school district office, 804 Bode Rd. Position on the ballot will be determined by lottery.

Meadow Knolls drainage woes blamed on culvert

Storm sewer drainage and street erosion problems in Meadow Knolls subdivision are being caused by a blocked culvert, said Schaumburg Village Administrator John Coste.

Coste said that a culvert, installed by a Laurel Lane resident, is blocked and causes drainage onto other property.

"When Meadow Knolls came into the village, we explained that special assessment is the only way to provide sanitary sewers, street lights, sidewalks and other amenities in the area but we promised not to force this on the residents," Coste continued.

Coste said a thorough check of village records indicates correspondence has not been received on the complaint from Walter Lamno, who called problems to the attention of The Herald last week.

Lamno complained that letters and phone calls to Coste and the public works department went unanswered.

"I have no record and neither has anyone else in the village of any phone calls from the resident," Coste added.

But, Coste noted the resident who put the culvert in front of his house was notified of his responsibility for keeping the area clear in a letter written last year by Village Engr. Joe Zgonina.

"This man went into the culvert project on his own and there isn't anything the village can do except remind him of his responsibility," Coste said.

New candidate for school board

Margaret Pageler, 33, of 269 Ida Rd., Hoffman Estates, has announced her intention to seek a seat on the Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 Board of Education this spring.

Mrs. Pageler, who is active in school district activities, was an unsuccessful candidate for the school board last year.

She has been a member of the district's legislation committee and has been involved in the community interest survey prepared by the community relations committee.

The only other person who has announced candidacy is James Blankenship, Schaumburg, a member of the local unit study committee, which is studying placement of all township schools under one governing body.

Two board seats are up for election. Terms of Adam Jelen Jr. and Sherwood Spatz expire this year. Neither one has indicated if he will seek reelection.

Petitions will be accepted from Feb. 27 through March 22 at the school district office, 804 Bode Rd. Position on the ballot will be determined by lottery.

'Operation Identification' pens available

by STIRLING MORITA

It looks like a toy out of a Saturday morning cartoon show commercial, but if used properly, it could save or help recover valuable belongings.

It is an electric vibrating pen that etches into wood, glass and metal surfaces. Police departments in Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Streamwood and Hanover Park will provide the instruments for free as part of a federally funded program called Operation Identification.

Starting today, a resident may go to the police station in his village and check out a pen.

THE AIM of the program is to help police find the owners of recovered stolen property or lost items. It can also act as crime prevention because thieves are reluctant to take marked, readily identifiable goods.

A person etches his driver's license number on all his valuables and makes a private list of the goods that were marked. The state in which the owner resides should be marked down too.

About $1,360 in funds was channeled through the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission for equipment for the four police departments. Each department had to chip in $80 for added costs.

Hoffman Estates has 29 instruments, Schaumburg 25, Streamwood 22 and Hanover Park 19. Window decals, car bumper stickers, posters and pamphlets were also received.

LT. ERWIN ZIVIN of the Streamwood Police Department said Operation Identification was started in Monterey Park, Calif., in 1963 and that during a period of time a startling correlation appeared in the town's burglary statistics.

In the 4,000 homes of persons who participated in the program, only three burglaries occurred, Zivin said. But during the same time period in the 7,000 other residences, about 1,800 burglaries were reported.

At the police station, a person must prove he is a resident by displaying a driver's license and another piece of identification before signing the etching instrument out.

Three of the villages allow three to five days to mark valuables and return the device to the police department. Upon its return, police give the person a window decal, bumper sticker, poster and pamphlet. If civic groups check out instruments for use by members, a longer lending time will be permitted.

In Streamwood, pens are checked out for 24 hours, and are available 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily.

RESIDENTS ARE encouraged to make a list of all the marked items along with factory serial numbers. Driver's license numbers are used because they are the easiest to check through police teletype systems. Other numbers that might be used are social security numbers or license plate numbers, but a person must use the same number on all his valuables for the program to be effective.

The pen can be used easily. No pressure is needed because the device has different settings.

The chiefs of the four departments feel the program is worthwhile if even one burglary is stopped or goods stolen in one burglary are returned to the proper owner.

SCHAUMBURG Police Chief Martin Conroy said Hanover Park, Streamwood and Hoffman Estates were asked to join Schaumburg in applying for the grant because the village boundaries and departments are interrelated.

Charged in Wheeling extortion probe

Two indicted county officials leave posts

by BOB CASEY
and AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Two officials indicted last week on extortion charges in connection with a Wheeling zoning case have left their posts with the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals.

Ira Collitz, 58, of 1000 N. Lake Shore Dr., Chicago, resigned his membership on the zoning board and Nicholas Phillips, 39, of 410 W. Marion St., Prospect Heights, was suspended from his $16,680-a-year planner job with the board by County Board President George Dunne.

They were among six men, including James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and two current Wheeling village officials accused by a federal grand jury of extorting a total of $350,000 from developers and builders in return for zoning and other favors.

The two village officials, William Bieber, $21,500-a-year director of building and zoning, and Michael Valenza, former trustee and head of the environmental commission, declined to discuss whether they will resign.

"I have no comment," said Bieber, who was named in four of the six indictments and in a total of 15 counts returned Thursday morning by a special federal grand jury that has been investigating alleged shakedowns in the village for almost a year.

VALENZA, A trustee from 1969 to 1973, said that "under advice of my counsel, I'm not to discuss this with anyone." He is now part owner of a hot dog stand, Do-Do's Dogs, 638 N. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling.

Valenza, 236 E. Jeffrey Ln., Wheeling, is charged with one count of extortion and one count of conspiracy to commit extortion in connection with a delivery of furniture valued at $1,700 or more he allegedly received as part of a shakedown of Wickes, Inc.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said Friday he had not talked with Bieber or Valenza about the federal charges. Scanlon said the village board may meet tonight in closed session to discuss the indictments.

He said he does not believe Bieber and Valenza should be referred to as village officials. Bieber is an employee of the village and Valenza is a non-salaried appointee as head of the environmental commission, Scanlon said.

Valenza's commission was recently given power to review zoning and planning decisions on proposed developments.

Dunne said Friday the county may

by JILL BETTNER

The Wheeling housewife breathed a sigh of resignation and said, "All I can say is it's about time. I'm not surprised at all, we all knew something was going on."

She had been asked to comment on a six-month federal investigation, that last week resulted in the indictments of six persons on charges of extortion and conspiracy in connection with alleged shakedowns of developers.

Reactions to the arrests by village residents were low-key, in sharp contrast to expressions of "shock" and "surprise" by village officials.

William Bieber, director of building and zoning; Michael Valenza, head of the environmental commission and a former village trustee; and William Hart, former village trustee, were among those indicted by a federal grand jury.

Others named in the indictments were James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, who has played a backstage role in Wheeling politics for more than a decade; Nicholas Phillips, a cousin of Stavros and employee of the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals; and Ira Collitz, a member of the county zoning board and former Democratic state representative from Chicago's 12th District.

THE SIX ARE accused of accepting a total of $300,000 from several developers and from Wickes Inc. in return for village zoning approval, permits and other favors between 1968 and 1973.

"I've heard about Stavros," said housewife Suzanne Kurt, 697 S. Merle Ln. "If he is involved in anything dishonest, I'm glad to have it come to the fore."

Mrs. Kurt said rumors of wrongdoing by village officials and others have been widespread in the community. Like other residents, she said indictments in Wheeling weren't unexpected after the recent arrests in Hoffman Estates and the shady deals uncovered in other suburbs by U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office.

"It seems like you get a little bit of this all over," she said. "I think people have just kind of become immune to it — they're not surprised by anything. I hope it won't create too much of an attitude of complete distrust. There are good guys and bad guys, but sometimes it's difficult to tell the difference."

"I think it's terrible about the arrests here, but with so much crooked stuff going on in the world, I'd expect anything," said Charles Krueger, proving Mrs. Kurt's point.

EDWARD Mahoney, 1450 Sandpebble Dr., raised the question of the possible effect that allowing builders to bend or break village building codes could have on the village in years to come.

"Nobody likes public officials stealing from the people and everything," Mahoney commented. "With all those condominiums they're jamming down our throats, we're going to have some terrible flooding problems in the future."

Jaycee awards to be presented at dinner Feb. 9

Schaumburg's "Outstanding Young Man" of 1974 will be chosen from among four finalists at a Feb. 9 Jaycees-Jayettes banquet at The Embers Restaurant, Lake St., Elgin.

The banquet, honoring outstanding young community leaders, is an annual event sponsored by both groups.

A cocktail hour begins at 6:30 p.m. followed by dinner.

Finalists include Michael Madden, 1405 Churchill Rd.; Raymond E. LeBeau, 421 Courtland Ct.; Gerald Kornelle, 124 Emerson St., and Gerald Dempsey, 4 N. 924 Norris, West Chicago.

He is a member and former officer of the Library Administrators Conference of Northern Illinois and has served as chairman of several committees including library practices, automation and audio-visual services.

He also is a member of the American Library Association and serves currently as chairman of a "Taped Radio Spots" committee.

He also holds membership in the Illinois Library and Special Library Associations.

Madden holds a master of arts degree from Loyola University and the University of Chicago and has published articles for the American Library Association and the University of Chicago.

He and his wife, Pat, are parents of two daughters, Ann, 9, and Elizabeth, 4.

LEBEAU, a Schaumburg village trustee, is a licensed dispatcher for United Air Lines.

His village responsibilities include serving as organizational chairman for Schaumburg Bi-Centennial commission; liaison trustee to the board of health; Dist. 54 Board of Education and police, fire and building committees, and chairman of the health, safety and recreation committees.

LeBeau is a member of the Schaumburg United Party executive board and Twinbrook YMCA.

the township," Conroy said.

Thieves might be stopped in their tracks if they see items that can be eventually identified or even traced back to them, he added.

"Actually, it will greatly assist the individual who uses it," said Hoffman Estates Police Chief John O'Connell.

"Probably any burglar will think twice about stealing," if he sees the markings.

"I think it will work pretty good. People were interested in it prior to our getting the equipment," said Sam Polotto, chief of Hanover Park's department.

"It makes our job a little easier," he added.

IN THE PAST, a misplaced item or recovered stolen property could lay in a police station because police could not locate the owner, but the marking system will allow instant identification.

The chiefs said the way to get residents involved is through publicity and civic groups. Towns like Davenport, Iowa, population about 100,000, have had only scattered response to the program.

"It is a good community project," said O'Connell. "Unfortunately, it's going to take a lot of public relations. We'll encourage use by organizations like the Jaycees for work within a group."

Girl Scout Chorus meeting

An organizational meeting of the Schaumburg Township Community Girl Scout Chorus will be held at 7 p.m. tomorrow at Eisenhower Junior High School, 800 W. Hassell Rd., Hoffman Estates.

Membership in the group is open to all junior, cadet and senior Girl Scouts in the Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg and Hanover Park area.

Meetings will be held the first and third Tuesdays of each month.

Additional information on the chorus can be obtained from area Girl Scout leaders.

7 won't let builder repair faulty sewer connections

Seven residents of Schaumburg's Timbercrest subdivision still refuse to permit Mor-Well Builders' subcontractors to repair faulty sewer connections on their property.

Assistant Village Engineer Vince Wroblewski is contacting the families again this week in an attempt to secure authorization for the work, which is scheduled to begin as soon as weather permits.

Nearly two years ago, 27 sanitary sewer violations involving The Hampton, one of several models built in Timbercrest, were discovered.

Flooding problems resulted at that time from storm drains at the entrances to garages. The drains were mistakenly attached to the village sanitary sewer system and the builder agreed to repairs at no cost to owners.

When problems were brought to light, the village contacted all owners involved. As of last September, 20 families had signed waivers permitting the work.

BUT IN THE meantime, the Metropolitan Sanitary District is insisting that problems be solved as quickly as possible and has notified the village that failure to rectify matters could result in a $1,000 fine per violation.

Itasca Meadows, Elk Grove end old feud

by JERRY THOMAS

A long-standing feud between Elk Grove Village officials and residents of the Itasca Meadows subdivision in unincorporated Elk Grove Township had ended.

An overwhelming majority of Itasca Meadows Homeowners directed officers of the Homeowners association Saturday to contract with Elk Grove Village for fire and ambulance protection.

Although the homeowners live about six blocks away from the Elk Grove municipal complex all but a few residents contract with the Roselle Fire Protection District six miles away.

Atty. Ed Remus, an Itasca Meadows resident, representing the Association, told its members, "Let past animosity disappear. You were treated unfairly in the past, now forgive and forget. We need to decide now if we want help from someone one minute away or 11," he added.

He urged the members to contract immediately with the village for fire service at the village's $42 a year rate.

Many present agreed and said they plan to make immediate individual application to the village for fire and ambulance protection and urged the officers, "Let's do it right now."

SATURDAY'S MEETING could be called the end of more than four years of bitter arguments between the village and subdivision homeowners. It came after the Jan. 6 death of an Itasca Meadows mother.

Mrs. Jean Pettee, 277 Martha St., eight months pregnant with her sixth child, died of a massive blood clot in her lungs. She was pronounced dead at Alexian Brothers Medical Center three blocks away from her home and her child died a short time later. Her husband had called nearby Elk Grove ambulance for service and the call was referred by Fire Chief Alan Hulet to the Roselle Fire District with which Pettee contracted at $21 a year.

The village and fire department have been criticized for a village policy that directed the chief to respond to uncontracted calls only in a life or death situation. According to the same policy people in nearby unincorporated areas received fire and ambulance service only if they contracted for it. Since the incident the village changed the policy to provide service on-a serve-now pay-later plan.

However the interim policy carries a cost of $50 per ambulance call and a charge of $100 per piece of rolling fire equipment.

When Elk Grove Village officials announced the policy they said it would be in effect only while area legislators worked for passage of a rural aid bill that would provide townships with the power to tax unincorporated areas for emergency services. They also pleaded with Itasca-Meadows homeowners to sign a contract for $42 a year.

Residents of Itasca Meadows pay no fire tax to any municipal body and have the option to contract with whomever they choose or go without protection.

In 1964 when Elk Grove Village created its own village fire department Itasca Meadows and other unincorporated areas were annexed from the Roselle Fire Protection District. Elk Grove Village residents were automatically taxed for service, but Itasca Meadows paid no taxes. Residents there received the emergency service free until October of 1972 when the village announced it would serve only those who paid and contracted for service at $84 a year.

HOMESOWNERS COMMENTED Saturday that the original $84 a year price tag, and what they described as high handed or bullying tactics of some village officials, created animosity that clouded the real issue — fire protection.

Members Saturday made it clear to the officers of the association that they were ready to let bygones be bygones. The majority said they were satisfied with the lower $42 a year price set a year ago.

An initial concern, that the village would attempt to force annexation on the area, was resolved when several homeowners said they may want to annex later if they face a water shortage due to the building of other developments nearby.

Remus first assured the members that village officials have pledged they will not force annexation or even suggest it unless residents petition for annexation.

"You may be begging Elk Grove Village in future years as the 'Devon 53' project that will inevitably be built on the south end of our subdivision goes in and our wells stop producing," he said later.

Mrs. Mary Ostrowski, secretary of the association, fiercely defended her right to remain outside the village and said she still feared forced annexation, with costly amenities like walks and street lighting.

Talk about benefits or penalties of annexation ended when the members decided they were tired of hashing over old arguments and wanted to talk only of the fire and ambulance protection.

A few of those who voted to go to Elk Grove Village for a fire contract, among them Gary Pettee, husband of Mrs. Jean Pettee, insisted they would only do so if the fee was prorated since the contract is from November to November.

Remus was critical of this request. "You will only be criticized again as looking for a free ride," he said. "Sign up now and just chalk up the few dollars as payment for past service," he said. He agreed however to discuss prorating with Elk Grove officials.

The homeowners also ignored one officer's suggestion they wait until July to contract with Elk Grove Village when their contract with the Roselle Department expires.

"And let's not ask for refunds from Roselle. They served well, now let them keep the few dollars," said a woman.

The group also decided they will still support legislation that would tax them.

Property losses from fires rise 145 per cent in 1 year

by TOM VON MALDER

Property loss due to fires jumped 145 per cent last year in Mount Prospect. The total fire loss for 1973 was $344,628 plus the deaths of two persons.

The 1973 figures compared with no fire deaths and $140,687 worth of property loss in 1972. However, Fire Chief Lawrence A. Pairitz said when last year's fire loss is compared with the value of property exposed to fire during the year ($73,965,960), "the figures indicate a loss of less than 0.5 per cent of the exposed potential."

Almost three-quarters of the fire loss increase came in two serious fires — one at the Mount Shire apartment complex, the other at the Culligan Water Conditioning Co. office and garage. The Mount Shire fire, at 1824 W. Palm Dr., caused $40,000 damage and killed Margaret Webb, 23, and Charles Lyons, 26, both of Glen Ellyn, on Oct. 29. Some $90,000 damage was caused by a Feb. 21 fire at Culligan's, 3 W. Central Rd.

THE BREAKDOWN of the fires last year shows 63 building fires, 25 vehicle fires and seven other fires. The vehicle fires alone caused $26,940. The figures are all from the fire department's annual report, released last week.

Over all, the fire department last year continued to keep pace with the rapid growth of the community. Their number of responses increased 17 per cent to 3,281. Nine new firemen were hired to help the department handle the increased workload.

A record number of ambulance runs was made by firemen last year. The 1,584 trips was an increase of 25 per cent over those made in 1972. Included in last year's total were 200 mobile intensive care calls. The new paramedic system, in which the ambulance is hooked up to Northwest Community Hospital for emergency care instructions, was in its first full year of operation in 1973.

The number of ambulance responses was just under half of the year's total responses. A further breakdown of ambulance calls shows that 163 were for public accidents (such as falls), 416 were highway accidents and 965 were medical assists. A total of 1,325 persons were transported — almost all to the three local hospitals.

OTHER ACCOMPLISHMENTS of the fire department last year included:

- Equipment: Two new ambulances purchased, both with the mobile intensive care units. The 1953 pumper with a 1,000 gallon-per-minute capacity was completely rebuilt by firemen.

- Community relations: A movie was made of the fire department, its programs and activities. Volunteer Firefighter Roger DeWent put the film together. It is being shown to community organizations.

- Firefighter Lonnie Jackson introduced the Junior Fire Marshal Program to local schools. The program is another aimed at preventing fires.

- The fire department endorsed the Medic Alert program, in which persons with medical problems or allergies can buy a bracelet or necklace which states their problem. In an emergency, the jewelry aids rescuers and a complete medical background is made available to them.

- Cadet program: After more than a year's effort by Firefighter Leonard Kaiser and village officials, two new laws were passed by the Illinois General Assembly which permit the hiring of firemen at age 18 and provides benefits for them equal to those older firemen receive.

- Health: A program of medical examinations for all fire department personnel was set up by Lt. Leslie Wuollett. Also, a physical conditioning program was set up with Prospect High School and some exercise equipment was purchased for Fire Station No. 2.

TAKE A DEEP BREATH, pull back those shoulders, and then that, as participants in the Mount Prospect Park District yoga class can attest. The art of yoga. Well, there's a little more to it.

Program planned to give seniors cut-rate services

A program that will allow senior citizens in Mount Prospect to get their hair done, their coats cleaned and their hearing tested at reduced rates is being organized. Target date for beginning the discount program is late this month.

Kathleen Stoga, program coordinator of the Senior Citizens Advisory Council, said 34 local merchants will offer various forms of lower costs to residents over 65. A complete list of the offerings is expected to be available later this week.

Mrs. Stoga said the dollar-stretching project will be an aid to Mount Prospect's 1,910 seniors, most of whom subsist on fixed incomes.

"We have 129 seniors below the poverty level, according to the last census," said Mrs. Stoga. "We have another group above the poverty level but not really able to make ends meet. And we have some in the high income bracket."

SENIOR CITIZENS in general, she said, "have problems making ends meet."

Basically what we're doing in this program is stretching the dollar. Buying power isn't what it was a year ago."

Among the various services that will be available to seniors at discount rates are pharmacies, beauty parlors, card and gift shops, cleaners, hearing and optical supplies, music shops, stationery and office supplies, banks, bowling alleys and theaters.

Participating merchants are located in downtown Mount Prospect, as well as at the Randhurst Shopping Center and Mount Prospect Plaza, according to Mrs. Stoga. Some of the discounts will be percentage amounts off the regular price, and others will be dollar amounts.

The new program will substantially expand discount programs already available to Mount Prospect senior citizens. Sixteen restaurants are offering various types of discounts on meals, and an arrangement between the village and Prospect Cab Co. makes cab rides available at 30 cents.

Water in New Town area declared safe to drink

It's all right to drink your water if you live in north Mount Prospect and adjoining unincorporated areas.

What began as a fairly routine water shortage caused by a power failure at two wells turned into serious speculation that the water may have been contaminated.

While tests were being made on the water, residents of some 6,000 households in the area were urged to boil their tap water. But by early yesterday the warnings about contaminated water were lifted and residents were told their water is safe to drink.

The episode started when two wells of the Citizens Utilities Co. stopped functioning. Because a third well was out of order, awaiting repairs, water was unavailable to residents between 8 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. Thursday.

Charged in Wheeling extortion probe

Two indicted county officials leave posts

by BOB CASEY
and AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Two officials indicted last week on extortion charges in connection with a Wheeling zoning case have left their posts with the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals.

Ira Colitz, 58, of 1000 N. Lake Shore Dr., Chicago, resigned his membership on the zoning board and Nicholas Phillips, 39, of 410 W. Marion St., Prospect Heights, was suspended from his $10,680-a-year planner job with the board by County Board President George Dunne.

They were among six men, including James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and two current Wheeling village officials accused by a federal grand jury of extorting a total of $300,000 from developers and builders in return for zoning and other favors.

The two village officials, William Bleber, $21,500-a-year director of building and zoning, and Michael Valenza, former trustee and head of the environmental commission, declined to discuss whether they will resign.

"I have no comment," said Bleber, who was named in four of the six indictments and in a total of 15 counts returned Thursday morning by a special federal grand jury that has been investigating alleged shakedowns in the village for almost a year.

VALENZA, A trustee from 1969 to 1973, said that "under advice of my counsel, I'm not to discuss this with anyone." He is now part owner of a hot dog stand, Do-Do's Dogs, 636 N. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling.

Valenza, 236 E. Jeffrey Ln., Wheeling, is charged with one count of extortion and one count of conspiracy to commit extortion in connection with a delivery of furniture valued at $1,700 or more he allegedly received as part of a shakedown of Wickes, Inc.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said Friday he had not talked with Bleber or Valenza about the federal charges. Scanlon said the village board may meet tonight in closed session to discuss the indictments.

He said he does not believe Bleber and Valenza should be referred to as village officials. Bleber is an employee of the village and Valenza is a non-salaried appointee as head of the environmental commission, Scanlon said.

Valenza's commission was recently given power to review zoning and planning decisions on proposed developments.

Dunne said Friday the county may (Continued on page 9)

by JILL BETTNER

The Wheeling housewife breathed a sigh of resignation and said, "All I can say is it's about time. I'm not surprised at all, we all knew something was going on."

She had been asked to comment on a six-month federal investigation, that last week resulted in the indictments of six persons on charges of extortion and conspiracy in connection with alleged shakedowns of developers.

Reactions to the arrests by village residents were low-key, in sharp contrast to expressions of "shock" and "surprise" by village officials.

William Bleber, director of building and zoning; Michael Valenza, head of the environmental commission and a former village trustee; and William Hart, former village trustee, were among those indicted by a federal grand jury.

Others named in the indictments were James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, who has played a backstage role in Wheeling politics for more than a decade; Nicholas Phillips, a cousin of Stavros and employee of the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals; and Ira Colitz, a member of the county zoning board and former Democratic state representative from Chicago's 12th District.

THE SIX ARE accused of accepting a total of $300,000 from several developers and from Wickes Inc. in return for village zoning approval, permits and other favors between 1968 and 1973.

"I've heard about Stavros," said housewife Suzanne Kurt, 697 S. Merle Ln. "If he is involved in anything dishonest, I'm glad to have it come to the fore."

Mrs. Kurt said rumors of wrongdoing by village officials and others have been widespread in the community. Like other residents, she said indictments in Wheeling weren't unexpected after the recent arrests in Hoffman Estates and the shady deals uncovered in other suburbs by U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office.

"It seems like you get a little bit of this all over," she said. "I think people have just kind of become immune to it — they're not surprised by anything. I hope it won't create too much of an attitude of complete distrust. There are good guys and bad guys, but sometimes it's difficult to tell the difference."

"I think it's terrible about the arrests here, but with so much crooked stuff going on in the world, I'd expect anything," said Charles Krueger, proving Mrs. Kurt's point.

EDWARD Mahoney, 1450 Sandpebble Dr., raised the question of the possible effect that allowing builders to bend or break village building codes could have on the village in years to come.

"Nobody likes public officials stealing from the people and everything," Mahoney commented. "With all those condominiums they're jamming down our throats, we're going to have some terrible flooding problems in the future."

Chamber of Commerce sets year's goal: 50 new members

The new president of the Mount Prospect Chamber of Commerce has set a goal of 50 new members for the Chamber this year.

George Lindholm said he hopes Chamber membership will surpass 250 during his term, which began last week. Currently, 203 businesses belong to the Chamber, including 50 that joined during the past year.

"With the momentum and growth, it seems like people want to join us now," said Lindholm.

He said he does not plan any substantive changes to the way the Chamber has been operating or the activities it sponsors.

"I would like to get the Chamber members more active, though, and do more for them," he added.

He praised past officers of the Chamber, including his immediate predecessor, John Riordan, saying the local Chamber "is getting bigger and better all the time."

LINDHOLM presented Riordan a plaque at the officer installation dinner last week "in gratitude from the entire Chamber." About 140 persons were present when Lindholm, manager of the Baskin Clothing Co. store in Randhurst Shopping Center, officially took over leadership of the Chamber. He had been vice president for one year.

Other new officers are Bill Radtke, of Radtke Insurance Agency, and Bob Bush, an attorney, vice presidents; and Thomas Purcell of the Mount Prospect State Bank, treasurer.

New directors are Ben Baldwin, of Equitable Life Insurance Co., Marie L. Caylor, of Harry E. Caylor Organization; Roger Starks, of Town and Country Barber Shop; Patrick Fairman, of Rich Port, Realtor, and Ted Collin, of First National Bank of Mount Prospect. Continuing directors are Lyn Grelak, of Lyn's Business Services; D. A. Young, of A.M. Corp.; Clayton Meyer, of Hi-Fi-Hutch, and Riordan, of Countryside Bank.

STUDENTS AT EISENHOWER School in Prospect Heights do the Virginia Reel as part of Pioneer Day activities at the school Friday. The celebration culminated the fifth grade class' study of colonial history. Among participants in the day's activities was Julia Jordan, a former history teacher, who demonstrated how to use such colonial relics as a children's loom and a dye pot.

William Street traffic woes to be mulled by safety panel

Traffic problems on S. William Street in Mount Prospect will be the subject of a meeting tonight of the village's safety commission.

Residents of the area have complained that many motorists and truckers are using the newly-extended street as a short cut between Prospect Avenue and Golf Road, posing a hazard to children.

Since a bridge over Weller Creek was completed several months ago, William Street is the only street between Elmhurst Road and Mount Prospect Road that connects Prospect and Golf.

tion asking the village to take steps to limit traffic on the residential street.

They have suggested four possible remedies: Reducing the speed limit on the street to 25 mph; making the intersection of William and Berkshire Lane a three-way stop; posting "Careful - Children" signs at nearby parks; and posting "Residential street - 5 Ton Limit" signs to restrict truck traffic.

Tonight's safety commission meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the village hall, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

The safety commission's findings will be reviewed by the village board's public health and safety committee at a meeting Feb. 27.

Three burglaries here; one arson

Three burglaries, one involving arson, occurred Monday in Mount Prospect.

The arson took place at the Casper Inez residence, 207 Orchard Pl., at about 2 a.m. Inez told police he heard his garage door open and then smelled smoke when he went to investigate. The burglars, after entering the garage by breaking a window, had set fire to some papers and a bag of peatmoss. Inez doused the flames.

Two residences in the northwest portion of the village were ransacked by burglars Monday evening, probably between 7:30 and 9:40 p.m. Police said they were unsure what, if anything, was taken after thieves forced the patio door at 1622 Greenwood Dr., the Luigina R. Maloney residence.

However, police said at least $80 worth of liquor was taken from the other home, Edward Delgan's at 912 Sumac Ln. The burglars bypassed both money and jewelry, police said, but they had turned on the family's record player.

Park district swimmers win

The Mount Prospect Park District's swim team, coached by Gil Fennie, has splashed its way through pools throughout the Northwest suburbs, Chicago and as far away as Rock Island.

The team beat an Arlington Heights squad, 318 to 160, but fell to Elk Grove, 234 to 201. Mount Prospect handily beat Glenview 331 to 150 in another meet, then was upset by the North Shore Swim Association, 218 to 216.

The 11 and 12-year-old girls and boys relay teams placed first in the Rock Island Relays, swimming against teams from the Quad Cities and Iowa. The winning teams consisted of Debbie Wagner, Julie Tank, Nora Halvorsen, Maria Falcon, Don Kalal, Tom Redig, Tom Balas and Bill Falcon.

Tom Balas also won a second place AAU medal in the one mile championship race at Welles Park in Chicago.

The 11 and 12-year-old boys team won the 200-yard medley and 200-yard freestyle relays at the Bernard Horwich "B" invitational meet in Chicago. Team members included Brian Halvorsen, Steve Balas, and Mike and John Dolan.

Hugh Moirano named to Holy Family board

Hugh J. Moirano, 1310 Mulberry Ln., Mount Prospect, has been appointed to the lay advisory board of Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines.

Moirano is senior vice president and general manager of the central division of United Air Lines. He will serve a three-year term.

Zoners OK houses

A request to build nine $55,000 to $65,000 homes on a three-acre lot at the northwest corner of Haven Street and Meier Road has been given a favorable recommendation by the Mount Prospect Zoning Board of Appeals. The builder, Frank Catino of Niles, also is petitioning the village for annexation. The property is currently just outside the village limits, in unincorporated Elk Grove Township.

HERE'S WHAT residents of S. William Street are concerned about: William, a through street, often is used as a shortcut between Prospect Avenue and Golf Road, rather than the nearby Mount Prospect Road.

Bus to Chicago doesn't pan out

A plan to run a bus for commuters between Mount Prospect and Chicago has failed to get off the ground.

"I guess people aren't desperate enough," said Joe Levko, an owner of Fiddler's Restaurant, 1799 S. Busse Rd. Fiddler's offered a round-trip bus ticket to downtown Chicago for $2.50 a day, plus a free cocktail thrown in after the return trip, but there weren't enough takers to get the bus rolling even once.

"It amazes me," Levko remarked. "We've had a lot of calls of people expressing interest in it. Twenty-five to 30 people were ready to sign up, but only 15 to 18 did."

Levko and the other owner of Fiddler's, Bob Allweiss, were prepared to subsidize part of the cost of operating the bus, but figured they'd need 30 riders to make it worthwhile.

"It was going to be like a big family car pool; a fun thing," Levko said. However, gas supplies, while low, are evidently now low enough to persuade commuters to abandon their cars in favor of the bus.

"If they're desperate, of course, they will take any means of getting downtown," Levko said. "It looks right now like there isn't that much pressure."

Levko and Allweiss are still hopeful of setting up a bus between Mount Prospect and Chicago. "I think once we get it running it would pick up steam," Levko said.

Playmakers to give two shows tomorrow

The Playmakers, a troupe of three women, will present "Imagination Theater," an improvisational and educational production for children, at two Dist. 23 schools tomorrow.

The troupe will perform at Betsy Ross School, 700 N. Schoenbeck Rd., Prospect Heights, and at 1:15 p.m. at Ann Sullivan School, 700 N. Schoenbeck Rd., Prospect Heights.

The troupe includes Eunice Joffe, Barbara Kaden and Inez Garland.

The concept of The Playmakers is to involve children in the production through music, dance and pantomime.

system. THE BOUNDED area included mainly the New Town section of Mount Prospect and also part of Prospect Heights and unincorporated Wheeling Township.

Although a spokesman for Citizens Utility told the Herald Friday there did not seem to be any chance of contamination of the water then, by Saturday the Mount Prospect Health Dept. was issuing a warning to residents of the affected area. Homeowners were told to boil tap water for at least five minutes, or to add 10 drops of chlorine bleach to each gallon of water, stir and let the water stand for a half hour before using.

Utility company spokesmen said they believed enough residual chlorine was in the system to prevent contamination, but as a precautionary measure, the water was tested and until the tests were completed, the water had to be treated.

Burglars hit two Sunset Drive homes

Two burglaries occurred on Sunset Drive in Mount Prospect last week, both taking place at about the same time.

Some $385 worth of jewelry and $20 cash were taken from the Elmer T. Olson residence, 304 E. Sunset Dr., after the burglars forced the patio door open, police said. The family was out between 6:30 and 7 p.m. Wednesday.

The second burglary occurred at the Joseph Buben residence, 1224 W. Sunset Dr., sometime between 7 and 10:45 p.m. Wednesday. Police said $500 worth of jewelry and $350 cash was taken after the burglars forced open the kitchen door.

Population pressures may cause housing crisis for village

EDITOR'S NOTE: Arlington Heights was the fastest-growing community in Illinois during the last decade. In an effort to chart the village's future, officials are now redrawing the master plan.

In the first of a series of articles, The Herald reports on the housing and business conditions forecast for the village by a firm of economic planners.

by KURT BAER
Arlington Heights may be heading into a housing crisis where demand will far outstrip supply.

In the absence of other controls, the village will have to allow more housing, at greater densities, than it is now if it wants to accede to potential population pressure.

That is one conclusion of an economic master plan recently prepared for Arlington Heights by the firm of Larry Smith & Associates.

Besides housing, the report looks into existing economic conditions, potential development of commerce and industry, downtown redevelopment and three special areas — Buffalo Creek, Rand Road and Arlington Heights.

THE REPORT PROJECTS a maximum population of 118,500 persons by the year 1990, and a minimum population of 86,500.

"Even with multi-family development at 60 per cent of total residential development for 1972-1990, vacant land inside and outside the village will not be adequate to accommodate growth through 1990, except at higher density development," the report concludes.

Even with 100 per cent multi-family building at 15 units an acre, some even higher density developments would be necessary to meet the top population forecast.

"In general, the amount of land that should be set aside for residential development is contingent upon how much growth the community wishes to accept after 1990, and at what densities development should take place," the report states.

But if neighborhood character is to be preserved, restrictions will have to be placed on multi-family development.

Restrictions, principally in the form of single-family zoning, will "curtail population increase by screening out families and individuals without the financial resources to purchase the acreages specified by the zoning code when multi-family housing is not an available option," the report states.

"A relative decline in population growth may in no way impair the economy of Arlington Heights. Communities across the nation have begun to question the supposed benefits concerning growth, which can entail congestion, pollution, neighborhood decay and severe strains on the public economy."

SINGLE-FAMILY development, even if economically feasible, has a higher public cost, the study finds, in terms of school impact and other services.

Total 100 per cent single-family development would add three times as many school-age children to the population as 100 per cent multi-family building. By 1990, the difference would be more than 3,000 children under low population projections, and 9,000 children under high population projection.

"From a policy perspective, the Vil-

Former member appeals to Caucus

Rule against third term on school board attacked

by BETTY LEE
A news analysis

The school board race is on in Arlington Heights and once again there are questions about the operations of the Dist. 25 Nominating Committee.

The nominating committee, commonly known as the caucus, aims to find and endorse well-qualified candidates for the board.

But if a candidate has been found and has served two terms well, why couldn't he be endorsed for a third term?

The person who put the question before the caucus this year is H. Robert Powell of 110 S. Kennicott, Arlington Heights. Powell is no newcomer to Arlington Heights elementary schools. He has served two consecutive terms on the board and acted as its president. Prior to his involvement in Arlington Heights, he served on the Prospect Heights School Dist. 23 board.

According to the bylaws of the committee, "no candidate shall be eligible for nominating committee endorsement as member of the board of education having served six consecutive years plus that part of an unexpired term to which he may have been elected."

POWELL SEEKS to have the bylaw amended. Persons who have served the board well and have interest in the education and schools in Arlington Heights should be eligible for third term endorsement, he said.

"I think the precedent is worth working at," Powell said. "I do feel that in the past there were some instances in the merit of people being able to serve again."

He added that he realizes the evils in stagnate boards, but that it takes a new board member two to three years to learn about the school system. He may be a productive board member during his second term and should be given an opportunity for a third.

However, if a candidate is not endorsed by a caucus, he may choose to run as an independent in the school board race. But the caucus has backed winning candidates for the past 19 years and only five candidates ran as independents, none of them successful.

POWELL SAID he would not run as an independent if he is not chosen for endorsement by the nominating committee, which will choose two for the race on Wednesday.

"The community has benefited from the existence of the nominating committee," Powell said.

The caucus was formed in 1954 to eliminate the politicking in the races and because there were few candidates seeking the school board positions.

Its membership is open to "non-political, non-religious" organizations who have "civic or education interests." Each organization sends two delegates to the meetings.

THE ORGANIZATIONS include PTAs, homeowner associations, fraternal organizations, cultural groups and others.

During the past years, the caucus has almost always endorsed incumbent candidates, except for the 1965 election year. School board president Victor Myer, who had already served five consecutive years, sought another term.

The caucus at that time decided not to endorse him because, they said, "automatic reapproval would discourage other qualified candidates." Myer chose not to run as an independent and subsequently dropped from the race.

Powell's plea to lengthen the two-term limit was brought up last year by a delegate of the caucus, but was voted down, said Robert Wade, chairman of the nominating committee.

Even if the proposal to change the bylaw so that the caucus can endorse candidates for third terms, the bylaw would not be effective until next year's election, said Wade, adding that delegates initiate the changes.

The nominating committee will endorse two persons on Wednesday for the school board elections. Candidates include Powell; Joan Klusmann, 3 E. Canterbury; Robert Kazlauskis, 639 N. Kaspar and James Foster, 1416 N. Walnut. Mrs. Klusmann and Kazlauskis are the incumbents.

The Arlington Teachers Assn. has recently screened the candidates and has approved all four for the election.

Impeachment group to meet with Crane

Congressman says position is 'neutral'

Impeach Nixon Committee members will meet with U. S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, to make him aware of the impeachment sentiment in his district.

The meeting was agreed to by Crane on Friday after 12 committee and Independent Voters of Illinois members confronted him at a flagpole dedication at Samuel Kirk Developmental Training Center in Palatine. No date has been set for the meeting, but Crane indicated he might not be available until early March.

They sought out Crane to ask for the conference after four weeks of trying to set up a meeting through his staff proved futile, said Anne Holiday, an Impeach Nixon Committee coordinator.

The committee will present Crane with petitions signed by residents of his district calling for Nixon's impeachment at the meeting in an attempt to get the impeachment process under way so the involvement, if any, of President Nixon in recent scandals can be determined.

Crane turned down an invitation from the two groups to represent pro-Nixon forces in a debate on impeachment planned for Feb. 24.

"My position is absolutely neutral," said Crane, because he will be a member of the grand jury which might impeach Nixon.

IMPEACH NIXON forces confronted U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, at a flagpole dedication at Samuel Kirk Center Friday. Crane agreed to a future meeting with the group to discuss impeachment sentiment.

State rep's laundry hassle may come out in the wash

by BOB LAHEY

A state representative has threatened to bring the weight of the Illinois Attorney General's Office to bear on an Arlington Heights merchant over a $3.90 package of laundry which lay unclaimed in his store for four months.

In a letter to Dryden Cleaners, Inc., written on General Assembly stationery, Rep. Virginia B. Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, said she was giving the operator of the establishment until Feb. 12 to find a table cloth she claims was lost from her laundry.

Unless the table cloth is found, or a "reasonable settlement" is offered, she said she would appeal to the Consumer Fraud Division of the attorney general's office for relief.

Details of the incident were related, at the Herald's request, by Emmanuel Baum, who has operated the cleaning

Charged in Wheeling extortion probe

Two indicted county officials leave posts

by BOB CASEY
and AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Two officials indicted last week on extortion charges in connection with a Wheeling zoning case have left their posts with the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals.

Ira Colitz, 58, of 1000 N. Lake Shore Dr., Chicago, resigned his membership on the zoning board and Nicholas Phillips, 39, of 410 W. Marion St., Prospect Heights, was suspended from his $16,680-a-year planner job with the board by County Board President George Dunne.

They were among six men, including James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, and two current Wheeling village officials accused by a federal grand jury of extorting a total of $300,000 from developers and builders in return for zoning and other favors.

The two village officials, William Bieber, $21,500-a-year director of building and zoning, and Michael Valenza, former trustee and head of the environmental commission, declined to discuss whether they will resign.

"I have no comment," said Bieber, who was named in four of the six indictments and in a total of 15 counts returned Thursday morning by a special federal grand jury that has been investigating alleged shakedowns in the village for almost a year.

VALENZA, a trustee from 1969 to 1973, said that "under advice of my counsel, I'm not to discuss this with anyone." He is now part owner of a hot dog stand, Do-Dog's Dogs, 636 N. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling.

Valenza, 236 E. Jeffrey Ln., Wheeling, is charged with one count of extortion and one count of conspiracy to commit extortion in connection with a delivery of furniture valued at $1,700 or more he allegedly received as part of a shakedown of Wickes, Inc.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said Friday he had not talked with Bieber or Valenza about the federal charges. Scanlon said the village board may meet tonight in closed session to discuss the indictments.

He said he does not believe Bieber and Valenza should be referred to as village officials. Bieber is an employee of the village and Valenza is a non-salaried appointee as head of the environmental commission, Scanlon said.

Valenza's commission was recently given power to review zoning and planning decisions on proposed developments.

Dunne said Friday the county may

by JILL BETTNER

The Wheeling housewife breathed a sigh of resignation and said, "All I can say is it's about time. I'm not surprised at all, we all knew something was going on."

She had been asked to comment on a six-month federal investigation, that last week resulted in the indictments of six persons on charges of extortion and conspiracy in connection with alleged shakedowns of developers.

Reactions to the arrests by village residents were low-key, in sharp contrast to expressions of "shock" and "surprise" by village officials.

William Bieber, director of building and zoning; Michael Valenza, head of the environmental commission and a former village trustee; and William Hart, former village trustee, were among those indicted by a federal grand jury.

Others named in the indictments were James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, who has played a backstage role in Wheeling politics for more than a decade; Nicholas Phillips, a cousin of Stavros and employee of the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals; and Ira Colitz, a member of the county zoning board and former Democratic state representative from Chicago's 12th District.

THE SIX ARE accused of accepting a total of $300,000 from several developers and from Wickes Inc. in return for village zoning approval, permits and other favors between 1968 and 1973.

"I've heard about Stavros," said housewife Suzanne Kurt, 687 S. Merle Ln. "If he is involved in anything dishonest, I'm glad to have it come to the fore."

Mrs. Kurt said rumors of wrongdoing by village officials and others have been widespread in the community. Like other residents, she said indictments in Wheeling weren't unexpected after the recent arrests in Hoffman Estates and the shady deals uncovered in other suburbs by U. S. Atty. James Thompson's office.

"It seems like you get a little bit of this all over," she said. "I think people have just kind of become immune to it — they're not surprised by anything. I hope it won't create too much of an attitude of complete distrust. There are good guys and bad guys, but sometimes it's difficult to tell the difference."

"I think it's terrible about the arrests here, but with so much crooked stuff going on in the world, I'd expect anything," said Charles Krueger, proving Mrs. Kurt's point.

EDWARD Mahoney, 1450 Sandpebble Dr., raised the question of the possible effect that allowing builders to bend or break village building codes could have on the village in years to come.

"Nobody likes public officials stealing from the people and everything," Mahoney commented. "With all those condominiums they're jamming down our throats, we're going to have some terrible flooding problems in the future."

business in Arlington Heights since 1963. REPEATED attempts to contact Mrs. Macdonald over the weekend were unsuccessful.

According to Baum, the dispute began on Jan. 23. He gave this account:

On that day, a woman he did not know entered the store and asked for a laundry package in the name of Macdonald.

When he presented the package to her, the woman demanded to know its contents. Baum told her he did not know what the package contained. He said the woman criticized him for not knowing what his customers brought in.

However, she paid him the $3.80 and then decided to open the package to inspect the contents. She first declared that the sheets and pillow case in the package did not belong to her, Baum said, and then charged that the sheets had been scorched.

Baum said he explained that laundry received by him is jobbed out (to a laundry in Skokie) and asked her what she expected him to do.

He said that she demanded that he enter a claim with the Skokie laundry for her. It was then, Baum said, that he checked the number on the package against his ledger and discovered that the laundry had been received on Sept. 24, 1973. The handwritten ledger, under that date, shows an entry: "8859 Macdonald 2 sheets, 2 cloths."

BAUM SAID he told her he could not make a claim against the laundry firm after four months. (He told the Herald he is not liable for unclaimed goods left in his store for more than 30 days. Laundry from the Skokie plant is normally returned in two or three days, "not more than a week," he said.)

Baum said the woman then asked if he knew who she was. When he said he did not, she identified herself as Virginia Macdonald, adding "I am the state representative for this area." (Mrs. Macdonald is one of three state representatives in the 3rd Legislative District. Dryden Cleaners, in fact, is located in the 4th Legislative District.)

Baum said Mrs. Macdonald then "stormed out" of his store and he heard no more from her until he received her letter, dated Jan. 28, 1974. It reads:

"INASMUCH AS you claimed no responsibility and refused to make any effort to replace the missing table cloth or adjust the laundry charge for the scorched, badly laundered sheets and pillow cases when I picked up my laundry in your establishment on January 23rd, I plan to take action.

"If by February 12th you have not found the table cloth which you have lost or offered a reasonable settlement, I will refer this case to the Consumer Fraud Division of the Illinois Attorney General's Office."

Baum said he has shown the letter to his attorney, and plans to have it enlarged and framed for hanging above the cash register in his store.

FIREMEN FROM Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect Meier roads Friday. The barn served as a maintenance team up to pour water on a burning barn near Golf and and storage shed for the Clearbrook Construction Co.

$2,000 barn fire near Golf, Meier rds.

A fire Friday morning destroyed part of a barn used for heavy equipment maintenance and storage by the Clearbrook Construction Co., Mount Prospect. Firemen from Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect were called to the fire near Golf and Meier roads, formerly the Curtis Farm.

A Clearbrook company employee reportedly was welding a piece of equipment and touched off the fire when the welding torch ignited gasoline fumes.

The barn, part of a group of old farm buildings north of Forest View High School, smoldered for an hour after firemen brought the blaze under control.

No one was injured in the fire. A preliminary damage estimate of $2,000 was set by the Arlington Heights Fire Department.

Friendship Club meets Tues.

The Friendship Club of St. James Church, Arlington Heights, will meet at noon Tuesday in the Convent Hall, 800 N. Arlington Heights Rd. Travel movies will be shown.

The next meeting of the club will be held on Feb. 19 at noon.

Water in New Town area declared safe to drink

It's all right to drink your water if you live in north Mount Prospect and adjoining unincorporated areas.

What began as a fairly routine water shortage caused by a power failure at two wells turned into serious speculation that the water may have been contaminated.

While tests were being made on the water, residents of some 6,000 households in the area were urged to boil their tap water. But by early yesterday the warnings about contaminated water were lifted and residents were told their water is safe to drink.

The episode started when two wells of the Citizens Utilities Co. stopped functioning. Because a third well was out of order, awaiting repairs, water was unavailable to residents between 8 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. Thursday.

The area affected by the water shutdown is bounded by Palatine Road on the north, Kensington-Foundation Road on the south, River Road on the east and Elmhurst Road on the west. The Randhurst shopping center is not part of that water system.

THE BOUNDED area included mainly the New Town section of Mount Prospect and also part of Prospect Heights and unincorporated Wheeling Township.

Although a spokesman for Citizens Utility told the Herald Friday there did not seem to be any chance of contamination of the water then, by Saturday the Mount Prospect Health Dept. was issuing a warning to residents of the affected area. Homeowners were told to boil tap water for at least five minutes, or to add 10 drops of chlorine bleach to each gallon of water, stir and let the water stand for a half hour before using.

Utility company spokesmen said they believed enough residual chlorine was in the system to prevent contamination, but as a precautionary measure, the water was tested and until the tests were completed, the water had to be treated.

Two nabbed here for possession of marijuana

Two men were arrested for possession of marijuana early Saturday morning after being stopped by Arlington Heights police for an apparent traffic violation.

Michael J. Stewart, 28, of 1320 N. 34th St., Melrose Park, and Albert T. Peterson, 28, of 475 Wood Dale Rd., Wood Dale, were arrested and charged with possession of marijuana.

Stewart was also charged with driving under a revoked license and fraudulent use of a driver's license.

After stopping the car, police noticed an odor of marijuana from the interior of the automobile and Stewart's clothing. They found marijuana seeds in the car, and arrested both occupants, according to police.

A search of Stewart and the car revealed a substance that was apparently hashish, a plastic bag of apparent marijuana, possible marijuana butts and a marijuana pipe. Police say that preliminary tests confirmed the two substances to be hashish and marijuana.

Police added that Stewart admitted to driving under a false driver's license at the station and gave his real name. A check of records showed that Stewart's license had been revoked.

Three persons hurt in auto collision

Three persons suffered minor injuries in a two-car collision on Algonquin Road, just east of New Wilke Road, Friday night.

Merlyn Petersen, Douglas Petersen and Marlene Petersen, all of 537 Laurel, Elk Grove, were taken to Northwest Community Hospital, treated and released.

The driver of the second car, Brian O'Hara of 1884 Stockton, Hoffman Estates, was apparently not injured.

Merlyn Petersen was charged with failure to yield the right-of-way while coming out of a private driveway.

Four persons injured in three-car crash

Four persons were taken to Northwest Community Hospital with apparently minor injuries after a three-car collision at Euclid and Wilke Saturday afternoon.

Alice Feick and Mitchell Feick of East Sparta, Ohio, were treated and released at Northwest Community. Catherine Camis of 1338 N. Walnut, and Lucille Gerts of 401 N. Harvard, were also treated and released.

Alice Feick, driver of one car, was charged with disobeying a stop sign. She apparently ran a stop sign on Euclid, colliding with the car driven by Lucille Gerts, according to police. Mrs. Gerts' car then collided with the auto driven by Aleta M. Sullivan of 143 Hill Dr., Hoffman Estates, reports show.

PTA notes

Dunton School PTA will present "Drugs? Not Our Child," an Art Linkletter film on drug use Tuesday in the multi-purpose room of the school, 1200 S. Dunton. The film will start at 7:30 p.m.

Hazel Dallstream, juvenile protection chairman of the Arlington Heights Council of PTA, will talk about the student drug problems in the village. A question and answer period will follow.

"A Look at Lincoln," a dramatic portrayal of the life of Abraham Lincoln, will be presented Thursday to all students at Thomas Junior High School, 303 E. Thomas, Thursday.

Starring Richard Blake, the portrayal will be presented at two assemblies beginning at 9:15 and 10:15 a.m.

Blake will enact three phases of the life of Lincoln, the nation's 16th president. He will portray young Lincoln as the storyteller, Lincoln, the campaigner and Lincoln, the war-weary president.

The program was arranged by Thomas School PTA cultural arts co-chairmen Marilyn Jordan and Ann Kelly.

lodge of Arlington Heights will have to set off the community advantages associated with single-family development against the increased expenditures in the public sector engendered by this type of development.

"The density of multi-family housing and consequently the number of units must be strictly controlled, especially in areas to be annexed, in order for the community to retain its character.

"A variety of low-density zoning schemes will accomplish this result and the necessary means should be adopted," the report recommends.

THE LARRY SMITH report is proposed as one of 10 sections that will make up Arlington Heights' new master plan. Entitled "Economic Planning," the report is pending before the village plan commission.

In terms of village businesses, the report concludes that "the community needs to clean up its commercial zoning, control strip development, attempt to promote specialty, convenience and auto center development, focus its office construction and organize the existing facilities for greater value and efficiency."

The report finds that there is now too much commercial zoning in Arlington Heights along with a danger of extensive commercial strip development along major streets.

SPECIFICALLY, it recommends that:

- Conversions of houses and other small buildings to offices be prohibited, and that no more offices be built along Arlington Heights Road except where already zoned.
- Provide incentives, like a public parking garage, for office development within the central business district.
- Encourage office park developments in the Arlington Industrial Research Center, particularly along Dundee Road, and encourage the location of major headquarters buildings within industrial parks.
- Concentrate retail stores in the central business district and keep all retail strip stores off of Arlington Heights and Dundee roads which are "particularly critical."

- Plan convenience stores in residential areas.

- Relocate auto dealers on Rand, Dundee or Algonquin roads "as a means of improving their efficiency and controlling strip development."

Accord sought on track living conditions

A proposed agreement between Arlington Park Race Track and the Village of Arlington Heights assures the track use of its backstretch in exchange for upgraded housekeeping and fire safety in the area.

It is intended as an interim, five-year statement of living standards, based upon minimum requirements of the Illinois migrant labor camp law. There is no statewide law or program setting standards for backstretch housing.

Arlington Park Pres. Jack Loomis has called the agreement requirements "reasonable, and sufficiently so, that we're going to do them."

For its part, Arlington Park will:

- Install fire extinguishers, fire alarms and fire hoses in its wooden barns.
- Repair or add comfort stations where needed for backstretch workers.
- Make all necessary repairs to screens, doors, windows and walls.
- Register backstretch workers, make specific room assignments, and require each worker to clean his room daily.
- Clean each restroom, shower, toilet and wash basin twice daily.
- Set up an office for workers to report housing complaints.
- Instruct and assign workers for fire fighting and conduct daily fire prevention inspections.

The agreement also gives village officials the right to inspect backstretch quarters to verify that the standards are being met.

FAILURE TO correct deficiencies could lead to fines or other punitive action.

In return, the village will agree to exempt the race track from the license fees normally charged for hotels and rooming houses and permit the continued occupancy of backstretch quarters for a period of five years.

The public health and safety committee has recommended that the village board adopt the proposed agreement, which was proposed by an administrative task force appointed by Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson to look into backstretch conditions.
